Leo M. Frank's Fate Is Now in Hands of the Jury; Motion for Mistrial Is Denied by Judge L. S. Roan

JUDGE ROAN CHARGES JURY THAT THEY ARE SOLE JUDGES OF WITNESSES' CREDIBILITY

He Discusses "Reasonable Doubt," Declaring That Burden of Proof That Defendant Is Guilty Beyond "a Reasonable Doubt, but Not Beyond All Doubt" Rests Upon the State

GOOD CHARACTER IS MATERIAL, HE DECLARES, BUT DOES NOT SUFFICE IF GUILT HAS BEEN PROVEN

Judge Roan Was About Twenty Minutes Reading His Charge to the Jury – The Jurors Leaned Forward and Listened Attentively as He Proceeded – Here Is the Charge in Full, Just as It Was Delivered

Immediately after overruling the motion for a new trial made by Attorney Arnold, Judge Roan began his charge to the jury. He concluded at 12:47.

The judge first charged the jury on the question of reasonable doubt. He said that the presumption of innocence was in the defendant's favor until overcome by a reasonable doubt, not beyond "any doubt," but beyond a reasonable doubt.

He then defined murder, expressed malice, and malice.

The judge charged the jury that they were the sole judges of the credibility of witnesses. He outlined the legal meaning of "direct evidence" and "circumstantial evidence." He declared that evidence of good character on the part of the defendant was relevant and material, but that if good character were proven it would not suffice if guilt were shown.

He then defined for the benefit of the jury the meaning of the word "character." The fact, said the judge, that the solicitor asked witnesses if they had heard of misconduct was not to be taken as evidence of such misconduct if they failed to answer.

He said it was for the jury finally to say, judging the credibility of witnesses, as to the good character or bad of the defendant. "If you believe," he concluded, "beyond a reasonable doubt, the defendant to be guilty, you should return a verdict, 'We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of murder.' If not you should bring in a verdict, 'We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty.'"

The judge concluded that the jury could in its wisdom find the defendant guilty with a recommendation for mercy, which would mean imprisonment for life.

After thanking and admonishing the jury, the judge concluded his charge at 12:47.

STATE OF GEORGIA VS. LEO M. FRANK } Murder. Fulton Superior Court. Trial: July 28 to Aug. 21, 1913.

CHARGE OF THE COURT.

Gentlemen of the Jury:

This bill of indictment charges Leo M. Frank with the offense of murder. The charge is that Leo M. Frank, in this county, on the 26th day of April of this year, with force and arms, did unlawfully and with malice aforethought kill and murder one Mary Phagan by then and there choking her, the said Mary Phagan, with a cord placed around her neck.

To this charge made by the bill of indictment found by the grand jury of this county recently empanelled Leo M. Frank, the defendant, files a plea of not guilty. The charge as made by the bill of indictment on the one hand and his plea of not guilty filed thereto form the issue, and you, gentlemen of the jury, have been selected, chosen and sworn to try the truth of this issue.

PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

Leo M. Frank, the defendant, commences the trial of this issue with the presumption of innocence in his favor, and this presumption of innocence remains with him to shield him and protect him until the state shall overcome it and remove it by evidence offered to you, in your hearing and presence, sufficient in its strength and character to satisfy your minds beyond a reasonable doubt of his guilt of each and every material allegation made by the bill of indictment.

I charge you, gentlemen, that all of the allegations of this indictment are material and it is necessary for the state to satisfy you of their truth by evidence that convinces your minds beyond a reasonable doubt of his guilt before you would be authorized to find a verdict of guilty.

NOT BEYOND "ANY" DOUBT.

You are not compelled to find, from the evidence, his guilt beyond any doubt, but beyond a reasonable doubt, such a doubt as grows out of the evidence in the case, or for the want of evidence, such a doubt as a reasonable and impartial man would entertain about matters of the highest importance to himself after all reasonable efforts to ascertain the truth. This does not mean a fanciful doubt, one conjured up by the jury, but a reasonable doubt.

Gentlemen, this defendant is charged with murder. Murder is defined to be the unlawful killing of a human being, in the peace of the state, by a person of sound memory and discretion, with malice aforethought, either express or implied.

Express malice is that deliberate intention unlawfully to take away the life of a fellow-creature, which is manifested by external circumstances capable of proof.

Malice shall be implied where no considerable provocation appears, and where all of the circumstances of the killing show an abandoned and malignant heart.

ARE EVIL DESIGN, AS MALICE.

There is no difference between express and implied malice except in the mode of arriving at the fact of its existence. The legal sense of the term "malice" is not confined to particular animosity to the deceased, but extends to an evil design in general. The popular idea of malice in its sense of revenge, hatred, ill will, has nothing to do with the subject. It is an intent to kill a human being in a case where the law would neither justify nor in any degree excuse the intention if the killing should take place as intended. It is a deliberate intent unlawfully to take human life, whether it springs from hatred, ill will or revenge, ambition, avarice or other like passion. A man may form the intent to kill, do the killing instantly, and regret the deed as soon as done. Malice must exist at the time of the killing. It need not have existed any length of time previously.

When a homicide is proven, if it is proven to be the act of the defendant, the law presumes malice, and unless the evidence should relieve the slayer he may be found guilty of murder. The presumption of innocence is removed by proof of the killing by the defendant. When the killing is shown to be the act of the defendant, it is then on the defendant to justify or mitigate the homicide. The proof to do that may come from either side, either from the evidence offered by the state to make out its case, or from the evidence offered by the defendant or the defendant's statement.

SOLE JUDGE OF CREDIBILITY.

Gntlemen, of the jury, you are made by law the sole judges of the credibility of the witnesses and the weight of the testimony of each and every witness. It is for you to take this testimony as you have heard it, in connection with the defendant's statement, and arrive at what you believe to be the truth.

Gentlemen, the object of all legal investigation is the discovery of truth. That is the reason of you being selected, empanelled and sworn in this case—to discover what is the truth on this issue formed on this bill of indictment. Is Leo M. Frank guilty? Are you satisfied of that beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence in this case? Or is his plea of not guilty the truth?

The rules of evidence are framed with a view to this prominent end —seeking always for pure sources and the highest evidence.

Direct evidence is that which immediately points to the question at issue. Indirect or circumstantial evidence is that which only tends to establish the issue by proof of

To Offer Resolution Ordering Official Probe of Speer Case

Clayton, Chairman of House Judiciary Committee, to Ask House to Allow Committee to Make Official Probe

SPEER MAY BE GIVEN HEARING IN GEORGIA

Committee and Georgia Delegation Are in Accord and Delegation Is Not Surprised at Committee Action

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The judiciary committee of the house, after reading more of the charges against Federal Judge Emory Speer this morning, directed Chairman Henry D. Clayton to present a resolution to the house, authorizing the committee to proceed with a full and complete inquest of the accusations against the jurist.

Judge Clayton will introduce this resolution at tomorrow's session of the house, and will ask its immediate consideration. It is anticipated that the resolution will be passed without serious opposition after which the committee will arrange for a special inquiry into all phases of the case.

From these facts Judge Clayton said to The Journal correspondent today, following the committee meeting, it is believed that a special subcommittee will be appointed to take testimony in Georgia at to give Judge Speer ample opportunity to be heard. Speer has indicated that, while he desires to be heard, his health will not permit him to visit Washington at this season of the year. He is a sufferer from hay fever and he prefers to remain in Georgia until frost has fallen.

The action of the judiciary committee, while apparently precipitated and unexpected, was not surprising to members of the Georgia delegation. It was learned today that the Georgia congressmen and the judiciary committee are in perfect accord as to the proper method of procedure in the case.

There are more than one hundred pages of the report of Special Examiner olton, of the department of justice, who investigated the accusations against Judge Speer, and more than twice that volume of papers in the exhibits accompanying the report with affidavits and other documents.

Meantime Representative Bartlett, of Georgia, acting as the dean of the Georgia delegation and its committee of one to review the charges and report to the delegation his conclusions with a view to their course of action, if any, is considering the matter. He has looked into the report, but the work of examination of the papers was interrupted today by the judiciary committee's consideration of the case. He expects to report to the delegation on his examination of the papers this week.

GEORGIA DELEGATES WAIT.

The Georgia delegation feels that the proper parliamentary stage has not been reached to warrant action on the part of any of the Georgians. It is the unanimous belief of the delegation that the charges against Speer should be fully investigated by the judiciary committee before the delegation determines as to what action, if any, it should take. This plan will give to Speer an opportunity to present his side of the case, and disprove, if possible, the accusations that have been lodged against him. If the judiciary committee, after its inquiry, decides the charges have been sufficiently substantiated to warrant further proceedings, then and then only will the motion to impeach be made in the house. A Georgia congressman will undoubtedly make the formal motion and the house will call for the papers in the case so that it may vote intelligently.

BARTLETT WORKS.

Congressman Bartlett, acting for the delegation, devoted most of yesterday to reading the charges against Speer. He declined today to discuss the character of the charges or give any indication as to how they impressed him.

The fact, however, that the committee has directed its chairman to offer a formal resolution, thus bringing the matter to the attention of the house officially, is taken to mean that the members of the committee have been impressed with the gravity of the charges.

Named Postmaster by President Wilson

WILSON TO READ MESSAGE ON TUESDAY UNLESS HUERTA ACTS

Will Outline Publicly Nation's Policy Toward Mexico Unless Next Few Hours Bring Change in Attitude

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25.—One thing can prevent the presentation of President Wilson's Mexican message to the two houses of congress in joint session tomorrow. That is for Huerta and the small group of people with him claiming to control the government of Mexico to indicate that they yield to the proposals of the United States government for the establishment of a constitutional government and peace in Mexico. The president's hope is he will not have to present the message.

To those who discussed Mexico with him today the president intimated that he would hold his message open until the last moment to give Huerta and his colleagues the opportunity to do the patriotic thing for the country. He intimated also that he had some hope that Huerta would comply.

In doing this Mr. Wilson said he could not discuss his message because the events of the next twenty-four hours might change it. Therefore, he did not feel that he ought to open any possible avenue by which what he has written in the message could become public prematurely.

This evening, however, he said he could invite the members of the foreign relations committee of the senate and of the foreign affairs committee of the house to come to the White House and to them in confidence would reveal the nature of the message in full and the reasons prompting him to undertake to deliver it. He said it was the longest message he had yet written, and that it covered at least seven pages of single spaced typewritten manuscript. He said also that it was not harsh in its terms, for he remembered that while a small group of men now asserted domination over the affairs of the rights of the entire Mexican people must be lost sight of. Everybody in this country should remember that, and he thought did remember it, he said. To one of his callers the president laughingly said:

Bolling Jones Is Named Postmaster By the President

Well-Known Business Man Nominated to Succeed Hugh L. McKee, Whose Resignation Has Been Asked For

HIS NOMINATION HAD BEEN EXPECTED SOME TIME

He Is Officer in Two Large Institutions and a Director in Several Others–Present Postmaster's Attitude

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington on Monday announced that Bolling H. Jones, of Atlanta, was nominated by President Wilson as postmaster at Atlanta.

Mr. Jones will succeed Hugh L. McKee, whose resignation has been asked for by the department at Washington.

The fact that Mr. Jones would be nominated to this position has been known for some time, and, in fact, was announced in The Journal some time ago.

Mr. Jones has been emphatically a progressive Democrat in state politics, and his appointment was favored by Senator Hoke Smith.

Beyond his interest as a citizen, Mr. Jones, however, has never sought political honors, but has devoted his time to a large range of business interests.

He is secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Stove Works, of which his brother, Sam D. Jones, is president; vice president of the Fulton National bank; a director of the Continental Trust company; a director of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association and the Association of Credit Men, and a director of the Atlanta Freight Bureau, in which latter organization he was chairman of the board of directors last year.

Mr. Jones has also taken an active part in the work of the chamber of commerce, and has been noted for his wide interest in the progress and commercial betterment of the city. He will bring to the Atlanta postoffice a splendid business experience and a tested executive ability.

It has been reported from Washington that the resignation of Postmaster McKee was requested following an inspection of his office, in which lack of discipline had been charged.

He has been quoted as refusing to tender his resignation unless asked for on political grounds. He claims that he knows nothing of any charges against him in his official capacity, and has been given no chance to reply to them. His term would expire in the regular course next year.

Jones' Nomination Will Be Confirmed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The nomination of Bolling H. Jones to succeed Hugh L. McKee, as postmaster at Atlanta was sent to the senate this afternoon by President Wilson. Other Georgia nominations were:

D. F. Davenport, postmaster at Americus.

A. L. McArthur, at Cordele, and Mayry L. Carswell, at Jeffersonville, Twiggs county.

The confirmation of Jones as postmaster at Atlanta will automatically remove McKee, who refused to resign his commission at the request of the department.

The Jones nomination was referred to the postoffice committee of the senate and Senator Hoke Smith will expedite its consideration. It is certain that the nomination will be favorably reported and it is expected that Jones will be confirmed at an early date, possibly this week.

The department recently requested McKee's resignation on the strength of a special investigator's report, in which it was charged that the office has been poorly managed. McKee was given ten days in which to resign. It is understood that he offered to step down and out if the charges were withdrawn and he was allowed to serve out the present fiscal quarter, expiring September 30.

The department declined to entertain this proposition. The removal of McKee, it is believed, will be followed shortly by a general reorganization of the personnel of the Atlanta postoffice. It is reported that DeWitt C. Cole will be displaced as assistant postmaster and that many other important changes will be made.

Other Georgia Postmasters Named by President

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25.—President Wilson sent to senate the nominations of the following Georgia postmasters:

D. F. Davenport, Americus; Bolling H. Jones, Atlanta; A. L. McArthur, Cordele; Mary L. Carswell, Jeffersonville.

JURY TAKES UP EVIDENCE AFTER GOING TO LUNCH; VERDICT IS NOW AWAITED

No Sooner Had Solicitor Dorsey Concluded His Record-Breaking Speech of Nine Hours and Twenty Minutes Than Attorney Arnold Moved for a Mistrial on Grounds That Frank Had Not Had a Fair Trial

DEMONSTRATIONS OVER SOLICITOR HAVE TENDED "TO COERCE AND INTIMIDATE JURY," SAID ARNOLD

Five Instances of These Demonstrations Which, Mr. Arnold Asserted, Must Have Been Heard by Jury, Were Cited. Judge Immediately Overruled Motion–Dorsey's Final Summing-Up Speech–Mrs. Frank Almost Faints

The case of the state versus Leo M. Frank went to the jury at 12:47 o'clock Monday afternoon. Court was then adjourned and the jury taken to lunch. After the jurymen finished eating they were escorted to a room on the fourth floor of the court house where they will deliberate until they reach a verdict or until they satisfy the court that it is impossible for them to agree.

Immediately after Solicitor Dorsey concluded his long argument—nine hours and twenty minutes—at noon Attorney Arnold, asked that the jury be taken from the court room whereupon he arose and made a formal motion for a mistrial.

Mr. Arnold based his motion upon six grounds, as follows:

First. That at the beginning of the trial the court had declined the request of the defense that the court room be cleared.

Second. That the audience applauded when the court refused to rule out evidence relating to women, and that the jury was in a room but twenty feet distant and could have heard the applause.

Third. That on Friday, August 22, when the jury was but 200 feet north of the court house a large crowd, outside in the street, had cheered the solicitor, crying "Hurrah for Dorsey!"

Fourth. That on Saturday, August 23, when the jury was about 100 feet north of the court house, a large crowd again cheered the solicitor.

Fifth. That on Monday morning, August 25, a large crowd of women assembled in the court room before the trial began, and that when the solicitor entered he was loudly cheered; that the jury was in a room about twenty feet distant and could have heard the cheers.

Sixth. That these demonstrations tended to coerce and intimidate the jurymen and influence their verdict.

After stating the grounds of the motion Mr. Arnold argued it. He declared that the behavior of the spectators throughout the trial had been disgraceful and shameful, and that the defendant had had anything but a fair trial.

SOLICITOR DORSEY DEMURS.

Solicitor Dorsey demurred to the motion, and Mr. Arnold called several of the bailiffs who had been in charge of the jury, swore them and asked them a number of questions. Some of these bailiffs admitted that they had heard cheering, but stated that they did not know what it was about at the time. They denied that they had heard any shouts of "Hurrah for Dorsey!"

Mr. Arnold himself took the stand and testified to having heard these cheers when the jury was within earshot.

Judge Roan overruled the motion, announcing that he would charge the jury and after it retired the defense could, if it desired, call other witnesses to complete the showing.

A subdued titter went around the court room when the judge announced his decision and Attorney Arnold immediately called the court's attention to the demonstration.

It required twenty minutes for Judge Roan to read his charge. The jury listened attentively.

Just as Solicitor Dorsey concluded his speech Mrs. Frank, wife of the defendant, showed signs of faintness. Friends handed her a glass of water and fanned her. While Judge Roan was reading his charge Mrs. Frank leaned her head against that of her husband, and the latter had his arm about his wife's waist.

It was announced shortly after Judge Roan that should the jury reach a verdict at a reasonable hour Monday he would come to the court room to receive it, otherwise if a verdict is reached it will be a sealed verdict and not announced until Tuesday.

At twenty minutes to 2 o'clock the jury returned from lunch and was escorted to the fourth floor of the court house, where it began its deliberations with the purpose of making up a verdict.

WOMEN HAVE RIGHT OF WAY.

Hundreds of male spectators were disappointed Monday morning by being left outside the courtroom when the Frank trial was resumed for what promised closely to be its last day.

All women who were waiting when the doors were opened were given right of way into court. Some 175 of them were seated before the officers began to admit the men. And not more than 50 of these latter could get in, as a consequence. The waiting line remained, however.

The street in front of the courthouse was crowded when Solicitor Dorsey crossed it from his office in the Kiser building to enter court. He was cheered enthusiastically by the outside crowd.

Judge Roan opened court by admonishing the spectators against disorder. There were many among the spectators, no doubt, he said, who did not appreciate the proper decorum to be observed in a courtroom; and these he wished to warn specifically against demonstrations of any kind. Violators of the warning, he would evicted summarily from court.

"Be careful of your demeanor," said he. "Your conduct here, if improper, might invalidate all of this work that has been done in the past four weeks."

DORSEY RESUMES.

Solicitor Dorsey resumed.

"Gentlemen of the jury, I am even more exhausted this morning than I was Saturday. My throat is in such shape that I fear I cannot do full justice to the case.

"When we closed I was in the midst of a brief analysis of the statement of this defendant. I am not going into an exhaustive analysis of it, because it is not necessary to inconvenience you further, and I haven't the physical strength.

"But there are certain statements and assertions that merit an analysis.

"This defendant stated to you that his wife visited him at the police station. He says she was brought there by her two brothers-in-law and Rabbi Marx."

He read one of the sentences in Frank's statement. "I considered letting her come up to the third floor, but decided it was better not to make her confront the line of reporters and snapshooters.'

"Gentlemen, at the time he says his

Indictment of Murphy Asked

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The indictment of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall; Aaron J. Levy, leader of the Democratic majority in the assembly, and Senator James J. Frawley, chairman of the committee which investigated Governor Sulzer's campaign contributions, has been requested of the district attorneys of New York and Albany counties by Lynn J. Arnold, of Albany, an arden Sulzer supporter.

The indictment of the three leaders is asked on statements of many persons presented by Judge Arnold to the district attorneys, regarding an alleged conspiracy to put Sulzer out of the governor's chair. In so announcing, Judge Arnold repeated his declaration that money had been freely used to accomplish this result.

Judge Arnold, who is publisher of the Press Knickerbocker-Express, of Albany, said today:

"My newspaper has been friendly to Sulzer in this fight because we thought he was not getting a square deal. Because of this friendliness many persons have written to us, and called at our office, to tell us what they knew of a plot on the part of certain men, whom I cannot name now, to disgrace Sulzer and put him out of the governor's chair.

"This evidence has been placed before competent lawyers, and they believe with me that it is sufficient to warrant indictments in connection with the impeachment proceedings. As an instance of the number of men who are ready to testify, I will say that ten men came into our office Saturday afternoon with evidence relating to this plot. We believe that it is amply strong to warrant the indictment of Murphy, Levy and Frawley and others. I cannot say how many others now, nor can I tell the nature of the charges.

"They go to show, however, that there was a conspiracy and a plot against Sulzer. More than that, they tend to prove a fiendish crime far greater than that.

"This evidence, in part, is in the hands of District Attorney Whitman and the district attorney of Albany county. They are considering it. What they think of it I am not at liberty to say. They will have more of it soon."

GEORGIA RIFLE TEAM ENJOYS 'CUE IN CAMP

The Boys Are Doing Some Shooting, as Well as Turkey-Trotting and Eating

BY LIEUT. J. C. ADOLPHUS.

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Aug. 25.—The Georgia rifle team spent a quiet Sunday in camp and enjoyed very much a real old Georgia barbecue with plenty of Brunswick stew, cooked by a real old Georgia negro. The boys felt more at home today than any other time since their arrival at Camp Perry as they stood around the pit and watched Sam put a dash of various kinds of sauce over the pork and mutton as it baked over the red hot coals. The barbecue attracted a great deal of attention, as a great many people here had never seen meat cooked in this style. It is needless to say that all enjoyed the dinner very much.

General and Mrs. R. K. Evans and Lieutenant Colonel Thomas W. Griffith and other army officers were guests of the Georgia team at dinner today. General Evans said that he could not predict how the team would finish in the match, but if it finished as well as apperances indicate it will be well up in Class A.

All are on edge to get into the national individual match, which will be held Monday. This match is one of the greatest honors a man can win in the shooting game. It is expected that several Georgia men will be among the prize winners in this match. The weather conditions have been very bad during the past few days. The nights are very cool. The men have to sleep under three blankets to keep warm and have a big fire in the camp street.

Sergeant Williams, of Winder, Ga., and Sergeant Anderson, of Monroe, Ga., are the life of the camp, and they are great comedians. They even make some of these stern army officers turn their heads and smile by their witty sayings. They are not overly burdened with beauty, but they wear the smile that won't come off. If they make a good score they smile, and if they make a bad one they smile. Some of the men are inclined to be grouchy when they don't get the score they think they should have made, but when they look at one of these boys they have to smile, too. They are good men to have in any camp.

The Beau Brummels of the team are Major Wheeler, of Macon, and Lieutenant "Boots" Tupper, of Atlanta. When the day's shooting is over they do not lose one minute's time in getting into their spotless white or blue. Major Wheeler is a past master at the art of turkey-trotting. He has taught several of the Ohio beauties to "turkey." There is not much time to turkey-walk and do the bear, as the ironclad rule of General Nash and Major Seamans is that every man be in bed at 10 o'clock, and they are there, too.

Seven hundred and ninety-one entrants took the range today at the opening of the national idividual match. The match opened on the skirmish run, this to be followed by the 200-yard surprise fire, the 600-yard slow fire and the 1,000-yard slow fire.

Lieutenant B. Strycker, of the United States infanty, Kansas, made the highest score, 95 in the opening round. Lieutenant G. M. Walling, also of Kansas, was next with a score of 92. Final results will not be known until late this evening.

Forty Baby Snakes Found in Moccasin; Killed at the River

The season for snake stories is now open, and one of the first big ones issues from the office of Game Warden Mercer, who has given it the stamp of his approval.

The story has to do with the discovery of a five-foot water moccasin on the banks of the Chattahoochee, the sudden and unexpected death of the same moccasin; and a post-mortem examination which brought to light forty baby moccasins that ran down their mother's throat when the trouble began.

Game Warden Mercer has two of the baby moccasins up at the Capitol now, and they are "right peart" for their age.

A. E. Binder and a party of friends went fishing the other day at the river, and in the midst of the angling their fishermen's meditations were suddenly interrupted by the venomous hiss of a snake. Looking about, they saw a big moccasin with her mouth wide open and innumerable little moccasins doing a Marathon down her throat.

The men killed the snake, and cut it carefully open, releasing forty baby moccasins ranging in length from 6 to 10 inches.

Thirty-eight of the venomous little reptiles were killed, and the remaining two were carried to the state warden to substantiate the story.

Warden Mercer says that he will keep them for a little while, but that when the ugly things get a little bigger he will kill them.

Shoots "Peeping Tom" Dead Through Knot Hole in Door

When Dothan Farmer Looks Through Crack of Widow Tenant's Door, Bullet From Her Revolver Enters His Eye and Kills Him

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DOTHAN, Ala., Aug. 25.—J. F. Register, a well known farmer living two and one-half miles east of Dothan, was shot and instantly killed last night by a Mrs. Martin, a widow who lives with her two small children on Register's place.

Coy Chambliss, a young man of that neighborhood, is said to have gone to the home of Mrs. Martin early in the night partly intoxicated and raised a disturbance. Mrs. Martin is said to have made him leave. He later returned with Register. Register is said to have gone to the door, which was closed, and looked through a knot hole.

Mrs. Martin, thinking that it was Chambliss, took a shot at the knot hole with her pistol. The bullet went true to the mark and entered Register's eye, killing him instantly. Mrs. Martin then took her children and went to Register's home, telling Mrs. Register that she had killed Chambliss. Mrs. Martin was arrested and placed in the Houston county jail here. Register was about forty years old and leaves a large family.

Atlanta Cop Is Shot Looking Through Window

Officer C. F. Preston, of the police department, was wounded in the thigh by a bullet fired by R. E. Maner, of Gilmore Station, one night last week, when the policeman looked through a window at 42 Kennedy street, where Maner was calling on a young lady.

In company with another officer, Preston went by appointment to the corner of Kennedy and Lambert streets to meet Claud Leatherwood, of 44 Kennedy. The latter charged that a couple, whom he did not know, had conducted themselves in an improper manner several times in full view of his family and that he wanted the officers to see for themselves what was going on.

While the officers were in the yard of 44 Kennedy, Cochran, who had gone to the rear, heard a shot and ran forward to meet Preston, who said that he had been wounded by a shot fired from a side window of 42 Kennedy as he passed.

Maner was put under arrest at once and a revolver taken away from him. He denied any improper conduct on the part of himself and the girl, and states that he fired because he had noticed men looking in at the window on former occasions when he was calling at the house.

APPEALS' DECISION SAYS DAMAGE CLAIM IS VALID

Good Even Though Not Filed in Writing, According to Ruling

In a decision handed down by the court of appeals of Georgia Monday morning, the damage suit of Fitts vs. the Western Union Telegraph company was declared valid, even though the plaintiff had not filed his claim against the company in writing as stipulated in the contract on the back of the telegraph blank.

The company appealed from the judgment of the trial court on the grounds that the terms of the company requiring that all claims be submitted in writing within sixty days after the filing of the original message.

It was shown, however, that while the plaintiff failed to make a written complaint, that he, nevertheless, gave the agent through whom the message was sent oral notice of his grievance within a week after the telegram was sent and said agent told him that he would immediately take the matter up with officials for a thorough investiga*tion, thus indicating that the matter* would be handled in this manner. It was also shown that Fitts called on the agent from time to time and was told at each visit that the matter was being investigated.

The court of appeals held that this was equivalent to the filing of a written claim filed by the plaintiff.

ARRESTED FOR GIVING OUT WORTHLESS CHECK

Oscar L. Carter, a mechanic of 59 Bonnie Brae avenue, was arrested Monday on the charge of giving a worthless check on a local bank. The check was for $20 and was given Sunday in payment for hire of an automobile in which Carter took four of his friends joy riding.

At his hearing at the recorder's court he was told he would be released provided he raised the amount of the check, which his friends proceeded to do for him.

"Old Star-Gazer of Madison Square" Was One Time Professor

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Some of the mystery surrounding the death of "The Old Star Gazer of Madison Square" was cleared up yesterday at the grave when he was buried in the presence of a half dozen persons, one a woman who asked that the coffin be opened before it was covered.

She declared that the dead man, whose name was already known to be Frederick J. Seybold, was a professor in the University of Illinois forty years ago, resigning to promote typewriters and stylographic pens which he invented. Meeting reverses he came to New York and for the rest of his life told views of the moon for a dime in Madison Square. His friends are seeking his relatives, but no trace of any has been found.

AMERICAN MINISTER LODGED IN LONDON

Walter Hines Page Leases Residence in Historic Grosvenor Square

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Walter Hines Page, the American ambasador, today secured an official home for three years by taking on lease No. 6 Grosvenor Square. He had inspected many residences, most of which were offered at prohibitive prices.

The house is a plain, but substantial dwelling in the best section of London. Three doors away is the embassy recently purchased by the Japanese government, while the Italian embassy and the Chilean legation are in the same square.

The dukes of Portland, Manchester and Somerset also possess town houses in Grosvenor Square.

GAME WARDEN MERCER SENDS HUNTERS' LICENSES

State Game Warden Mercer has mailed out 28,000 blank hunting licenses to all parts of the state; and if the record of last year is maintained most of the licenses sent out will be sold.

Last year the hunting licenses brought in over $19,000, and this year the amount will probably be much larger as the hunting season promises to be unusually good.

"There are more birds in the state than we have ever had before," said the game warden." They have been properly protected, and from all parts of the state I hear that birds are plentiful.

The season for quail and doves will open November 20, but many licenses are being sold now for squirrel shooting and fox hunting.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent. of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, er a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. 25c. If yours cannot supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Property Loss of Thirty-Five Hundred Dollars—Money and Rings Stolen From Woman's Trunk While Flames Rage

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WAYCROSS, Ga., Aug. 25.—Three persons had close calls from death and property valued at $3,500 was damaged by the fire at the home of George W. Barnes, on Jane street, early last night.

Joseph A. Greene was caught on the second floor of the building and had to jump through a window; Mack Barnes, Jr., of Charlote, N. C., and George Fesperman, of Waycross, were asleep in the room in which the fire started and were hauled out by Mr. Barnes.

Flames gained rapid headway and had the entire house enveloped within a few moments. The house is in the heart of the coity, close to the business section, and a general alarm was turned in to save adjoining property. It developed today that Mrs. T. H. Grimshaw's trunk was rifled during the fire, money and valuable rings being stolen. Four men, whose identity is not known, were sen handling the trunks in the woman's room.

ONE KILLED, LADIES INJURED, IN SUNDAY WRECK AT SCOTTDALE

Gain of Ten Minutes in Engineer's Watch Responsible for Collision Between Georgia Freight and Passenger

A ten-minute variation in a locomotive engineer's watch was responsible for the rear-end collision, which occurred on the Georgia railroad at Scottdale Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, causing the death of one person, serious injuries to two ladies, minor injuries to a dozen other passengers, and the almost total destruction of several freight and passenger cars.

Mack Smith, a negro, of Lithonia, was killed, being thrown by the impact from the front platform of the day coach under the wheels.

Mrs. George Mathieson, who lives on Peachtree road, just beyond Buckhead, sustained a number of cuts about the face; her back was wrenched and her left shoulder injured.

Mrs. R. T. Cresse, of Carhlotte, N. C., daughter-in-law of Coleman E. Cresse, 198 Piedmont avenue, Atlanta, sustained injuries to her back, left arm, left leg and left hip.

Mrs. Mathieson and Mrs. Cresse were hurried to St. Joseph's hospital in an ambulance and were put under the care of Dr. G. Pope Huguley, who stated Monday morning that while their injuries were serious he did not think they were of a fatal nature.

Those others who sustained minor injuries were brought to Atlanta on a relief train and were given attention by the railroad's physicians.

Mrs. Mathieson and Mrs. Cresse were in the lavatory of the rear Pullman, which was telescoped for about eight feet by a freight engine. Mrs. Cresse was jammed between the splintered walls of the lavatory and the side of the car, and it required an hour's work on the part of several men with axes to cut through the car windows and chop away water tanks, basins and other debris before she could be liberated.

Mrs. Mathieson was thrown heavily against the side of the car and over a car seat.

The collision was between west bound freight train No. 19 and passenger train No. 3. Both were en route from Augusta to Atlanta. There is a wide curve about three hundred feet east of the Scottdale station and Engineer J. W. Guill, of the freight, says he was rounding this curve in a heavy fog when he first saw the rear end of the passenger train, which was just pulling away from the station.

Although going at a rate of but fifteen miles an hour Engineer Guill found it impossible to stop his engine before it crashed into the old wooden Pullman, which was splintered like kindling wood. The big freight engine ran its front end, smokestack and all, into the sleeping car.

Engineer Guill stuck to his post and brought his train to a stop before he left the cab. He explained the collision on the ground that his watch had gained ten minutes from the time he left Augusta at 9 o'clock Saturday night. This he ascertained after the wreck by comparing the timepiece with the watches of the other trainmen.

The freight was supposed to be running ten minutes behind the passenger, and Engineer Guill declares that when he approached the curve east of Scottdale he believed that the passenger train was well into the Atlanta yards.

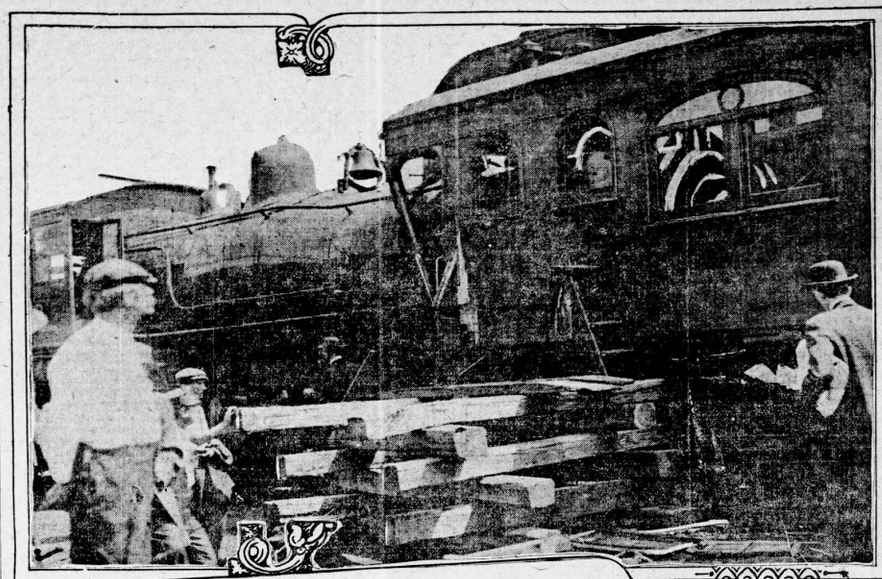

Conductor J. T. Overton and Flagman J. R. Robbins, of the freight, were thrown from the lookout of their caboose to the floor, the conductor sustaining a wrenched back and the fireman an injured knee. Engineer Guill suffered a slightly wrenched shoulder.

Robert Walker, negro fireman on the freight, jumped and escaped serious injury.

According to the trainmen, the passenger train was running four minutes late and the freight five minutes ahead.

It required a wrecking crew ten hours to clear the tracks.

Upper picture shows rear Pullman as it was telescoped by freight engine. Through the window can be seen point where Mrs. R. T. Cresse was caught in wreckage. It required an hour's work to extricate her. Mrs. George Mathieson, of Atlanta, was also in the rear of the last Pullman and received serious injuries. In the lower picture one of the smashed freight cars and its scattered contents are shown.

DR. HOLDERBY DECRIES THE "THIRD DEGREE"

Says Angel Gabriel, If on Earth, Would Probably Be Arrested

Preaching Sunday morning of the subject of fair dealing, justice and mercy, Dr. J. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Presbyterian church, declared that the divine law of justice and mercy are often violated by the state as well as by the individual.

"The law as ministered by the state is inclined to be vindictive and unmerciful," said he. "Our so-called courts of justice are often courts of injustice and prosecution. If you have a grivance with your neighbor you had better settle it by arbitration.

"In the eyes of the law today it seems that every man is presumed to be gilty of some devilment until he proves his innocence. Any man is liable to be convicted of some immorality on the testimony of an irresponsible witness who has been put through the Third Degree.

"The angel Gabriel, were he to visit the earth, would likely be convicted of some violation of law on merely circumstantial evidence. And it is quite certain that Jesus, were He to return to earth, would be suspected, arrested and crucified just as he was 1,900 years ago."

Martha Ruffin, Mrs. Grace's Maid, Slain Mysteriously Sunday

Martha Ruffin, once a maid in the employ of Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, and a witness in the sensational trial of Mrs. Grace charged with attempting to murder her husband, Eugene H. Grace, was found dead early Sunday morning in the rear of 109 Ponce de Leon place. Death was due to a single knife wound, which severed the jugular vein in the woman's throat.

The woman had been living in the alley just off Ponce de Leon for the past month, having lately separated from her husband, J. C. Ruffin, who was likewise a state's witness in the Grace case and formerly a butler in the Grace home. An investigation by the police showed that the woman had evidently been killed in her home and the lifeless body dragged through a potato patch for a distance of some fifty feet as a trail of blood was discovered leading form the house to a clump of bushes where the body was found.

Detectives are baffled by the crime and cannot so far assign any motive for the killing. Just at this time the officers are searching for Alex Smith, a negro lately known to have been intimate with the woman. They believe that Smith may be able to throw some light on the tragedy.

Alex Smith, who the police think can tell something about the murder of the Ruffin woman, is held at police headquarters on a charge of suspicion.

Prisoners Stop Ball Game to Be Shown a Calf With Six Legs

E. J. Seymour, formerly a newspaper man, political writer on the New York Commercial in days gone by, walked into Atlanta Monday, bringing with him from his home in Hastings, Fla., a six-legged calf. With the calf he was bound for California. Mr. Seymour is exhibiting the animal freak at one point after another, shipping his exhibition tent ahead of him by rail and walking through the country with the calf to overtake it.

"I am going to reach California in time for the exposition out there," said he. He added that his calf is a yearling now, and that the animal perhaps will be full grown and well exercised in all six of its legs when he gets to the coast.

Mr. Seymour gave a free exhibition of the animal within the Federal prison Saturday, the prisoners suspending a ball game to give him and his freak a thorough looking over. Mr. Seymour boasts that the calf has, in addition to six legs, four shoulders and a double backbone.

E. SETON BLYTH PLEASES WITH SUNDAY RECITAL

Famous Scotch Organist Is Heard by Large Audience at the Auditorium

E. Seton Blyth, the famous Scotch organist, gave a recital Sunday afternoon before a large and appreciative audience at the auditorium-armory, winning much applause.

Mr. Blyth displayed a grasp of musical expression seldom heard, playing the most difficult offerings with the same facility he used in the lighter subject. His technique and expression, according to the majority of music lovers present at the recital, easily places him among the world's first organists.

His selections ranged from the light subjects of the French school to the most difficult and all were equally well rendered. His first offering was "Grand Offertoire" by Lefebure Wely, in which Mr. Blyth brought out the bright sparkling vein of the French school with delightful tones and a brilliant touch.

Next he played selections from "The Holy City," Handel's "Largo," Flagler's "Alpine Pastoral," "Xerxes," Harker's "Twilight," Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Peace's "Sonata Da Camera." It was in the last selection that he reached his fullest powers and received thunderous applause.

During a recess it was announced that the following organists would be heard here on the next three Sundays, in the order named: Ferdinand Duncan, city organist of Seattle; Charles Reynolds, of Orange Grove, N. J.; and Frederick Hall, of Haddon Heights, N. J. All these recitals are free and the Atlanta Musical Festival association extends a cordial invitation to all music lovers to attend.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back."—(Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema, and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free: Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.—(Advt.)

ATLANTA GIRL HIT BY STRAY BULLET

Miss Frances Brown, Bystander in Cedartown Fight, Injured Painfully

Miss Frances Brown, daughter of Robert H. Brown, of this city, who was accidentally wounded by a stray bullet while visiting in Cedartown, Ga., is resting easily at Grady hospital, and unless unforseen complications set in will be able to leave within a week or ten days. Surgeons removed the missile from the young lady's thigh Sunday night and the operation was successful.

At the time of the shooting Miss Brown was on a visit to Miss Lois Mundy, who was entertaining a house party. The young people were congregated at the Seaboard Air Line depot Saturday morning when A. J. Sanders opened fire on John Rogers, the bullet going astray and striking the visitor.

Sanders claimed that the shooting was done in self-defense.

AUTO MUFFLERS MUST STAY ON, SAYS CHIEF

Beavers Instructs Policemen to Arrest All Motorists Who Use "Cut-Out"

The cutting out of mufflers on automobils must stop, is the mandate issued by Chief of Police Beavers Monday. The day watch, when lined up for roll call, was instructed to arrest all automobiles drivers who were discovered with their mufflers off.

Under a city ordinance it is a misdemeanor to cut out the muffler, but the ordinance has never been enforced strictly up to this time.

The chief's action comes after numerous complaints have been made to him. Hany citizens declare the noise resulting from the cutting out of this mufflers often awakens them at nights and at other times is disturbing.

The noise is caused by the explosion of gasoline and is sometimes as loud as a rifle shot with the muffler off. With the mufflers on the noise is suppressed.

LEO. M. FRANK'S FATE IS NOW IN HANDS OF THE JURY

wife was there, Rabbi Marx was with me.

"He doesn't prove his assertion, but relies solely on his own statement.

"If he can prove it, why didn't he?

"Can you tell me that there lives a true wife, conscious of her husband's innocence, that would have been deterred by a line of reporters?"

"UNFAIR," SAYS ARNOLD.

Attorney Arnold interrupted. "Your honor, I can't let this go on. It's the most unfair argument I ever heard. It's manifestly unfair to a man on trial for his life. It's an outrage upon law and justice."

There was some little discussion. Judge Roan said, "If it's in his statement, Mr. Arnold, I'll have to let Mr. Dorsey argue it."

"Let the galled jade wince!" cried Mr. Dorsey. "They know it!"

Attorney Rosser spoke up. "It's a dirty speech," he exclaimed.

Judge Roan ruled, however, that if the assertions were in Frank's statement, Mr. Dorsey could proceed.

"Frank said his wife didn't go there because snapshooters would get her picture," continued Mr. Dorsey. "I tell you there never lived a woman conscious of the rectitude and innocence of her husband that wouldn't have gone to his side—that wouldn't have gone through a line of reporters, snapshooters, and against the advice of any rabbi.

"Frank says in his statement, with reference to those notes written by Conley, that he told his friends in the jail that he knew Conley could write because he had written him too many notes asking to borrow money. He says he gave them directions to look in a drawer in the safe and find the card of a jeweler from whom Conley had bought a watch.

"This corroborates Conley as to the watch incident; and as to Conley telling Mr. Frank not to take out any more of his money to pay the jeweler.

"Scott says that no such thing ever happened as Frank giving them directions which resulted in the discovery that Conley could write.

"If Frank knew so well that Conley would write, in the name of fairness, why didn't he then and there, when they showed him the notes at police station, tell them that the writing was the writing of James Conley? Up to the time they discovered that Conley could write, only their discovery could force Conley to make an admission that he was connected with this crime.

"Frank says he knew that Conley could write.

NOTES KEY TO MYSTERY.

"Why, then, did he keep his mouth shut until the detectives discovered it, when he knew that these notes were the key that would unlock the mystery.

"Ah, you knew that Conley could write!" turning to the accused. "You knew it, because he had checked up the boxes at the pencil factory. You knew it, because, according to your own statement, he had written you notes asking to borrow money. You knew that the most powerful fact that could be brought to light was the identity of the person who wrote those notes. And yet, when you saw the notes Sunday morning at police station, you said not a word, although the notes themselves said that the crime had been committed by a negro.

"Gentlemen of the jury, it is not necessary for me to discuss the significance of this fact any further. You are obliged to appreciate it yourselves.

"Frank says, with reference to Conley's visit to the jail, that when Conley wanted to confront him he sent word to the detectives to get Mr. Rosser's permission. Mr. Rosser, on that day, was at Tallulah Falls, trying a case. But he got back from there, didn't he? He didn't remain up there. I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, and I measure my words when I say them—and if you've got sense enough to get out of a shower of rain, you know it's true—that never in the history of the Anglo-Saxon race, and never in the history of the African race in America, did an ignorant negro ever accuse a white man of a crime where the white man was innocent, and the white man refused to confront the negro.

"And I'll tell you another thing. There never lived in Georgia a lawyer with one-half the ability of Mr. Rosser, with a consciousness of his client's innocence, who wouldn't have said: 'Let my innocent client confront this negro.'

"I know that if a negro accuses me when I am innocent, I am going to confront him, whether my lawyer is in town or not. And if I do, perchance, wait until my lawyer returns, I am certainly going to confront him then.

"You make much of the fact that you didn't know what Jim Conley would say on the witness stand," said the solicitor, addressing the accused. "You could have known—if you had dared!"

ROSSER INTERRUPTS.

Mr. Rosser arose and objected, declaring that the solicitor's statement was untrue; that even the detectives at that time did not know of the innuendoes in Conley's statement.

"Oh, you can get up as much as you want to!" said Mr. Dorsey. "But I will put it up to the jury."

Mr. Rosser objected again. "He has no right to go into my conduct or to comment on my objections. He must stay in the record."

"I am in the record!" said Mr. Dorsey. Mr. Rosser objected again. Judge Roan said: 'You can argue that Frank refused to see his accuser." Mr. Rosser: "We didn't object to that." Mr. Dorsey: "Ah, they see the force, they see the force of it!"

Mr. Rosser objected again, and Judge Roan ruled with him.

"Well, if they don't see the force of it, then you do, gentlemen of the jury," said Mr. Dorsey. Judge Roan directed the solicitor to cease comments on the attorney's objections. Mr. Dorsey continued:

"This man Frank, with Anglo-Saxon blood in his veins, graduate of Cornell, superintendent of the National Pencil factory, so anxious to ferret out the crime that he phoned Schiff three times to get detectives, this man, Frank, refused to meet this ignorant negro on the flimsy pretext that his attorney was out of town. But Rosser returned to town, and then when he had an opportunity to know some of the accusations he dared not let Frank meet this negro.

"But it is not necessary to take up time with this. Tell me that the weakest of you, if you were innocent, and a black-skinned man charged you with an infamous crime—that any lawyer, Rosser or anybody else, could keep you from confronting him and nailing the lie?

"No lawyer could prevent me from confronting the man who accused me wrongfully, were he black or white."

INTERVIEW WITH LEE.

Turning to the defendant: "And you went in and interviewed Newt Lee at 12 o'clock Tuesday night. What did you do? Did you act like a man who wanted to get the truth? No. Instead of talking up and trying to get the truth from the man to whom you had infamously directed suspicion to save your own neck, the man whom you would have sent cheerfully to the gallows to save your reputation among the people of Washington street and the people of the B'nai B'rith—did you make an honest, conscientious effort as employer to employe? No. Acording to Lee, you hung your head and predicted that both of you would go to hell if he continued to tell the story which he tells to this good day.

In your statement you try to make us believe that your detective, Scott, and old John Black, concocted a scheme and lied to ruin you.

"The reason Frank didn't put it up to Lee and try to get the truth was because he knew that Lee was innocent, and that he himself was the murderer. And he knew that by trying to direct suspicion toward Lee he was adding another crime to his assault upon Mary Phagan's virtue and to his murder of her. He knew that he was making an infamous effort to send this negro to the gallows to save his own reputation and his own neck.

"OH, HE'S SMART!"

"Listen to this. Oh, he's smart! Listen how he qualifies and fixes up this point in his statement so that on rebuttal the technical law prevented our impeaching it: 'The detectives stressed the fact that 'couples had probably been let into the building by Night Watchman Newt Lee.' By Night Watchman Newt Lee, who had been there only two weeks; not by night watchmen—for he knew what the detectives could prove.

"During those weeks there wasn't but one person for whom his passion burned; and that person was Mary Phagan. She didn't meet him when Newt was night watchman. If it were not true that couples were admitted to the basement, why didn't he make the challenging statement to the police that at no time couples were admitted?

"Another thing. Listen to this: 'Those spots claimed to be blood on the floor—now I don't say they are not blood; they may be. They are right by the women's dressing room. And, by the way, about those accidents; we don't report all accidents there. There are accidents that we don't have records of. And also we use paint and varnish, a great deal of it. I've seen girls break bottles of varnish lots of times. And had it been blood, that hascoline, which is a great solvent and which was over it, would have been pink or red.'

"Contrast that with the reference he made to the floor around Barett's machine. There, he says, there wasn't a spot, much less a spot that looked like blood. He said 'there are spots all over the factory,' and yet he said there were none there.

"And you say that wasn't blood," made to the floor around Barrett's maculine wouldn't have remained that white. In the name of truth and goodness, then, why didn't you bring chemists in to back up your statement?"

Facing the jury:

"Gentlemen, wouldn't it have been the same color as witnesses here swore it was?"

"THOSE SPOTS WERE BLOOD."

Facing the defendant again: "If it be true that you didn't care what Dr. Harris said, why didn't you devote a little of the time you took with your attempt to tear down his statement, to bring a reliable chemist into court to bear up your assertions? In the name of truth and fair play, why didn't you sustain them? These gentlemen want the truth. There's but one answer; and you know what it is. Those spots were blood, and the color of hascoline wouldn't have changed, as you said it would, but would have remained just as the witnesses who testified here swore it was. There was no more important fact in the whole case for you, than to have brought in evidence to prove what you said. You couldn't get a chemist to come in here and sustain you."

Turning back to the jury: "Are you going to believe this statement, not backed up by any chemist on earth? Gentlemen, they couldn't get a reliable chemist to come in here and say that that was not a blood stain.

"They've got no defense. They never have come to close contact in this case, except on the question of abuse. They circle but never light. They dwell on varnish, and cat's blood, and Duffy's blood, but they won't knuckle down and show that those stains were not blood. You know, gentlemen, that that was blood. You know it was the blood of the innocent victim of his lustful passion. You know it, by the testimony of Mel Stanford, Mrs. Jefferson and 'Christopher Columbus' Barrett—'Christopher Columbus' Barrett, who was honest enough and brave enough to tell the truth even though he gets his living from the coffers of the National Pencil company.

"FLUTTER BUT NEVER LIGHT."

"And another proposition, gentlemen, over which they flutter but where they never light: they don't say Conley put her body down a hole. They can't name a hole. They don't say Conley put her down through that hole in the Clark Woodenware company, which would have concealed her body a far longer time than the place where it was found. Boxes were stacked high around that. And people coming into the basement, and the fireman, wouldn't have found it there.

"Would this negro who they say robbed the girl, even if he had taken the trouble to write the notes of his own volition, have taken time to tie it at cord around her neck—cord which, by their own admission, is seldom found in the basement but is plentiful on the office floor—if he had done all that, why would that negro have moved her body if it was more securely hidden where they say he attacked her?

"Will you tell me why, if he put her down through that scuttle hole back there, he tied the cord around her neck and dragged her out to where she surely would be found? Will you tell me why old Holloway called the police, when Conley was washing his shirt; and why he said 'That's my nigger?' And tell me why after detectives had searched around there for two weeks, blood was found around that scuttle hole—more blood than the poor girl ever was shown to have lost?

"Listen to this: In his own statement, Frank says that Quinn came to him and said he would like to take him back to the mtal room and show him spots that were supposed to be blood spots, and that the papers said had been found by Barrett; and show him, too, some hair—although he had seen all this in the papers that morning, and although he was so anxious to get the Pinkertons on the case that he phoned three times, and although he was torn up about it. Why did Quinn have to come and get him to go back there? Was that the conduct of the superintendent of a pencil factory, anxious to find the murderer of a girl employe?

CITES FRANK'S CONDUCT.

"Was that the conduct of a man anxious to aid the detectives?

"Yet he tells you in this statement, so early written, so glibly rattled off, that he made a minute examination of the blood spots with an electric flash light. Isn't it strange that Lemmie Quinn doesn't sustain you on that point? No one ever saw you examine what the host of witnesses said was blood. Why? Because such an examination never took place. If there was one spot on the earth that you didn't want to examine it was that blood there on the second floor, where by your own statement you were at work when this poor girl met her death.

"Frank says he visited the morgue twice, once in the morning and once in the afternoon. If it is true, as he says, that it tore him all to pieces when he saw the corpse that morning, I want you as honest men to tell me why he went there again in the afternoon. Boots Rogers testified that Frank did not look at the body that morning. Black said that he didn't see Frank look at it."

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser objected, contending that Rogers testified that he was not looking at Frank instead of testifying positively that Frank did not look at the body.

"NEVER LOOKED AT CORPSE."

"All right," said the solicitor, "I'm not going to quibble with you on that point. The truth is, and you know it, that he never looked at the body, and if he did neither Boots Rogers nor Black nor Gheesling saw him. If he did, it was just a glance as the light flashed on, and then he turned and went into another room."

Attorneys for the defense objected again on the ground that there was no evidence to show that Frank went into another room. Solicitor Dorsey replied:

"I know this evidence and I know what I'm talking about."

Attorney Arnold: "But what's the use in objecting, your honor, if he keeps right on?"

Solicitory Dorsey: "Let 'em look up the evidence, your honor. They've got plenty of time and nothing else to do?"

Judge Roan: "But they insist, Mr. Dorsey, that you do not go ahead until the matter is settled by reference to the evidence."

Solicitor Dorsey: "I insist, your honor, that they look up the evidence."

JUDGE LOOKS INTO RECORD.

Judge Roan: "Give me the record, Mr. Arnold," rather impatiently, "and I'll look it up myself."

"If he ever looked at the body, he looked at it briefly; and in that brief glance, if the arms were blackened with dirt and if the face was blackened and the mouth full of sawdust and the eyes black, and if he didn't know Mary Phagan, how could he identify her so promptly and so positively?

"The reason for his second visit, after he had failed to mention the tragedy to the family at dinner that Sunday, and after the sight of the corpse had torn him all to pieces, as he says himself, was that he wanted to put his ear to the ground and find out if there was any whisper or suggestion that Leo M. Frank was the man who perpetrated the dastardly crime. Rogers didn't see him. And Gheesling didn't see him. Neither saw him take a good look at the body.

"He admits himself that the sight of the corpse tore him all to pieces. He tries to make you believe that it was the automobile ride in the early morning air. Yet like a dog to its vomit, like a sow to her wallow, he went back down there to see the body of that innocent girl.

"No, that wasn't the reason. He went back there to see if he could detect a scent of anything which would indicate that the police had suspected him."

ROSSER CITES RECORD.

At this point the record on Boots Rogers' testimony was found. Reading from the cross-examination, Attorney Rosser showed where Rogers testified that Frank passed out of his view.

The solicitor still insisted that on the direct examination, Rogers had testified that Frank went out of the room.

"He wanted to get out of the view of anyone who represented the majesty and the dignity of the law," said the solicitor.

Attorney Rosser insisted that the solicitor was not confining himself strictly to the evidence.

"All right!" the solicitor finally exclaimed, impatiently. "I'll let that pass. I'll throw you that sop to satisfy you."

Resuming, he addressed the jury.

"This thing kept preying on his mind when he went home that night, until his guilty conscience finally prompted him to make a play of lightness. I suppose he must have done it just to satisfy himself that he could appear perfectly at ease; that he could repress any sign of nervousness. So he went in and read to them the funny story in the magazine. As he was not nervous then, and was not nervous at the table that night; he surely was nervous and won't deny it when he faced and had to discuss the proposition with the minions of the law on Sunday morning.

WHEN FRANK WAS NERVOUS.

"He was nervous when he started to turn on the power of the elevator down at the factory. He was nervous when he tried to start the elvator down to the basement. Unsupported by any oath, he tells you that a fireman had come around and instructed him not to lock the power box. I ask you what was the necessity of leaving the power box open when by a simple turn of the lever they could cut the current off, and thereby obviate all possibility of firemen being electrocuted?

"No, gentlemen, the truth is just like Holloway swore it in that affidavit he made to me back there in May. That power box was kept locked all the time, and the key hung in Frank's office, just where Jim Conley says it hung.

"When Frank got there that Sunday morning he had the key in his pocket."

ROSSER AGAIN OBJECTS.

Attorney Rosser objected. "There is not a line of evidence to that effect," he declared.

Solicitor Dorsey: "The point is that the box was unlocked, that Sunday morning."

Attorney Rosser: "That isn't the point he's stressing, your honor. He's trying to make it appear that Frank had the key in his pocket."

Judge Roan: "As I understand it, Mr. Rosser, he is claiming that as a deduction."

Solicitor Dorsey: "Let it pass.

The solicitor read from Rogers' testimony: "'Mr. Gheesling stepped in and flashed on the light, and I turned to see if anybody followed, and I saw Mr. Frank turn and go into what I thought then was a closet but found out afterwards that it was the room where Gheesling slept.'

WOULD NOT MISLEAD JURY.

"I don't want to misrepresent the evidence, for goodness knows there is enough without any such practice. I don't want to mislead this jury, and I will not mislead it."

He read from Frank's statement: "'After looking at the body I recognized the girl who had been to the factory the day before, and after I went to the office and found the name of Mary Phagan on the pay roll. I knew there could be no doubt of her identity.'

Turning to the accused: "And you might have added that when she did not yield to your demands you struck her; that she fell, and that then, to protect your character—no, I mean your reputation—you choked her, and you called Jim Conley to carry her body to the basement. and that because you had made out the payroll every week for 52 weeks you knew her name; and that because you had looked upon her with lust you knew her face. Yes, you might have added: 'I didn't see her, but for those reasons I knew it was Mary Phagan.'

CORROBORATES DETECTIVES.

"In his statement Frank corroborates the detectives by telling how they entered the room. And he tries to make you think that at one little glance he saw the wound behind her ear, the dirt on her face and in her hair and eyes, and he saw that her tongue protruded and was swollen, and that a cord was around her neck. The only way that you jurors can believe that he saw all of that is for you to believe that John Black and Boots Rogers perjured themselves to put a rope around this man's neck.

"Frank in his statement would have you believe also that Starnes is a perjurer, for he said: 'He called me over the phone. I asked him what was the matter, a fire, and he said, "No, a tragedy."' Yet Starnes tells you that the word tragedy was never mentioned. And he asked Rogers and Black if there had been a tragedy. It was on his nerves. Yet Starnes, the man who went after Lee when Frank directed suspicion toward him, the man who went after Gantt when he directed suspicion toward him, the man who has been on the detective force for years and years, is a perjurer, if you believe Frank.

"And why would he have you believe Starnes is a perjurer? That he would try to place a rope around Frank's neck, when to sustain his reputation or his ambition he could just as easily have gone after Lee or after Conley or after Gantt?

"Frank called Lee up at the factory—the first time he had done such a thing, Lee tells you. And in his statement he says he asked if Gantt had gone. Yet Lee tells you that Gantt's name was not mentioned. You tell me that all of these incriminating circumstances piling up are nothing but prejudice and perjury?

WHY HE CALLED LEE.

"Frank says, 'I succeeded in getting Lee and found out that Gantt had gone.' He had instructed Lee not to let Gantt in; and Lee, true to his trust, stopped Gantt at the door. So Frank said, 'o up with him, and see that he gets what he wants.' Yet, while he had never done it before, he innocently called Lee that evening. To find out about Gantt? No. To find if Lee had discovered the body.

"Would you convict a man o nthis circumstance, and on that circumstance? No, but I would weave a rope, no one strand of which is strong enough, but whin strands taken together forms such a rope, such a cable, that there is no doubt, no reasonable doubt, that this man murdered Mary Phagan.

"Frank stated to the police that he did not leave his office between certain hours.

"He didn't know then that his own detective, Scott, had found little Monteen Stoved. And on the day that Scott found her, May 3, he went to Frank at the jail. Frank in his statement now tries to get around it, saying, 'I don't think I left the office, but it is possible that I did go to answer a call of nature. One does those things unconsciously, you know.' If he had answered such a call, would he have repeated so positively and so many times that he did not leave the office?

"On May 3, Scott, as honest and honorable a man as I know, who said he worked hand in glove with the city detectives, and who, despite the fact that some of the others tried to run with the hare and chase with the hounds, held to his agreement. Scott went to him and said 'Did you leave the office from the time Mary came in until you went to call Mrs. White?' And Frank, who didn't know the importance of it then, answered 'No.' And Scott came back at him this way: 'Did you stay right in your office from the time you came from Montag's until Mary Phagan arrived?' And he answered 'Yes.' And Scott said 'Did you stay in your office every minute from 12 to 12:30?' And Frank answered 'Yes.' Not until he saw the devotion of this man Scott to truth and right, did Frank shut him out from his counsel. But not knowing its importance, he had told his own detective, in the presence of John Black, that at no time between 12 and 12:30 did he leave his office.

POWER OF THE JURY.

"Are you going to let him set aside what he then told the detectives, with a weak statement 'I might have answered a call of nature. One does those things unconsciously.' You can if you want to. No king, no potentate in the whole world has the power vested in an American jury. In the secrecy of the jury room, you may write a verdict which outrages truth and justice; and no power but your own conscience ever can call you to account. But if you do, wherever you may go, you will carry a burden. Others may respect you, not knowing the truth; but you will never have your own self esteem.

"The defense has made a mighty effort to break down the testimony of little George Epps, and to try to show that George Kendley, because he happens to believe that this man is guilty, is a liar. But there is one state's witness on that point against whom not a breath of suspicion has been raised. That witness is N. Kelly, who rode on the same car with Hollis—or rather with Matthews—and who tells you that Mary Phagan was not on there while the car went south on Broad to Hunter.

"Mr. Rosser says he doesn't care about medical evidence. I'm not going back on my raising when I tell you, gentlemen, that there is no more wholesome food than cabbage. If it's properly cooked it's easily digested—just as easy as any other meal you can eat, because most any other food takes just as long to digest. I tell you cabbage and cornbread and a glass of buttermilk is a fine meal for anybody. The assertion that they don't care about that evidence is not borne out by the records of the case. I'll venture to say, gentlemen, that these doctors, these general practitioners who didn't specialize on digestion, were brought in here because they were the family physicians of some of you jurors."

"AN INSULT TO JURY."

Attorney Arnold objected strenuously: "It's a grossly improper suggestion," said he, "and ought to be retracted and withdrawn. I want to ask your honor to reprimand him," pointing to Mr. Dorsey, "and remove the suggestion from the jury. It's even an insult to the jury."

Solicitor Dorsey: "I insist, your honor, that it is fair and legitimate argument."

Judge Roan: "What was your point, Mr. Dorsey?"

After Solicitor Dorsey explained it to him, Judge Roan said that if it was in the record, the solicitor could proceed.

"Well, it's not in the record," declared Mr. Arnold.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Well, it is only natural to presume that they were brought in here because of that. They were not specialists."

Judge Roan: "Go on, Mr. Dorsey."

"I thought so," said the solicitor.

Mr. Arnold jumped again to his feet. "Does your honor hold that that remark is proper?"

SOLICITOR ALLOWED TO PROCEED.

Without further coment, the solicitor resumed his argument.

"I can't see any other reason on God's earth except that, for bringing in men who haven't had experience in digestion. The number of witnesses that the defense put up in their attempt to refute this testimony, belies the assertion that they didn't care about it. It is one of the most important things in the case, gentlemen.

"It fastens and fixes and nails down the time when Mary Phagan was foully murdered in that pencil factory, with the accuracy which nothing but a scientific fact could display. It proves where she was when Monteen Stover was in the factory. It proves where Frank was when Miss Stover found him out of his office. Do you tell me that Dr. Childs, who didn't know anything about the function of gastric juices in the stomach, with only seven years' experience, and this gentleman from Michigan—can they put their statements against the assertion of Dr. Roy Harris on this point? I say no.

DEFENDS DR. HARRIS.

"Mr. Arnold says old Judge Samps Harris admitted him to the bar. I'm proud of the fact that he admitted me to it, too. He was a grand old man. And I'm here to say that old Judge Harris never had a son who would prostitute his profession here or anywhere else. Would you take their opinion against this son of Georgia who holds the highest position and the highest honor that it is possible to give him in the state?

"Do you tell me that this man Hancock, surgeon for the Georgia Railway and Power company, a man that saws off bones and experiments with cabbage in diseased stomachs—do you tell me that Hancock, who hasn't opened a medical book on this subject in ten years—do you tell me that his word in this case should stand for a moment against that of Dr. Harris?

"And Dr. Clarence Johnson, stomach specialist, of undoubted and unimpeachable ability and truth—do you tell me that when he and Dr. Niles and Dr. Funke said that science could and they would venture an opinion as to whether or not Dr. Harris' statements were true, they didn't know whereof they spoke?

WESTMORELAND PREJUDICED?

"They put up Dr. Westmoreland, gangrened with prejudice to such an extent that when I showed him an American Medical Journal he said it was a journal of mountebanks; you tell me that this man, who tried to run the state board of health, who said that Dr. Harris was found guilty of scientific dishonesty, and whose word on that was disproved by the minutes of the board, did not show by his testimony attacking Dr. Harris that they do attach some importance to the state's expert evidence?

"'I take acts, not words,'" said old Judge Lochrain.

"Briefly, let's run over this nervousness proposition. This man indicated nervousness when he talked to Starnes over the telephone. He indicated nervousness when Black went out to see him. He sent his wife down to the door to give him nerve when he himself was almost dressed and she had nothing on but a bath robe.

SENT NEWT LEE AWAY.

"But before I deal with that, let me go back to wher he warned Newt Lee to come back Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Old Newt, dutiful darky that he was, walked in and Frank was wash*ing his hands. Jim Conley hadn't come* yet and he sent Newt Lee out. Newt said that he wanted to sleep, that he wanted to lay down and take a nap, and he could have found a cozy corner about the factory. But Frank sent him away. He did it because he wanted an opportunity to burn that body, so that the police of this city would not have the mystery solved today and the public would never have known that the little girl lost her life in the factory.

"Let's consider his anxiety about Gantt, who said he wanted the shoes. He hung his head when he met Gantt, and when Gantt asked him about a pair of shoes he said, 'I think I saw a boy sweeping them out.' Doesn't it seem like Providence that this long-legged mountaineer left two pairs of shoes there instead of one? Then it was that he dared not say, 'I saw that boy sweep both pairs out.' He couldn't keep Gantt out and keep down suspicion, so he said 'Go up with Newt Lee.' And lo and behold, both pairs were there where he had left them.

"Rogers and Black, who went out to Frank's house that morning, tell you that he was nervous. He said he was nervous because he'd had no breakfast, because he hadn't had a cup of coffee. I tell you that he wanted his wife to go downstairs first because he wanted somebody to sustain him. When he telephoned for Darley to come to the pencil factory, he wanted somebody to sustain him. When he called for Attorney Rosser, he wanted somebody to sustain him. And he sent for Haas, because his conscience wanted somebody to sustain it.

FRANK'S NERVOUSNESS.

"This man Darley—we went into the enemy's camp to get ammunition! Fortunately I got an affidavit and tied him up, and he couldn't go back upon it here. I confronted him with the affidavit in which he had sworn 'Frank was completely unstrung.' You heard him change it here, and say that he was almost completely unstrung.

"But he couldn't go back on his whole statement. This man who called for coffee, called for it like Durant called for bromo-seltzer.

"That automobile ride and the sight of the body made him nervous, just like Durant said the gas overcame him. You know, gentlemen, that but one thing could have made him nervous. That was the knowledge of his own guilt. Witnesses tell you that he squirmed and rubbed his face, and Darley himself says that when Frank rode to police station on his pay Frank trembled on his knee and shook like an apen leaf."

The usual morning recess interrupted Mr. Dorsey.

INSIDE DOOR LOCKED.

"Old Newt says that when he went back Saturday afternoon he found the inside door locked—a thing that had never happened before. He says that Frank came out of his office and met him, and that before then Frank always caled him into the office to give him instructions when he reported for work. He says that when he went down into the basement he found. that little gas jet, which had always burned brightly before, turned down so low that it looked like a lightning bug.

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, it was turned down because when Frank went down there that afternoon to place the notes beside the body of the dead girl, he turned down the light in the hope that the body would not be discovered by Newt Lee.

"Then Monday afternoon, when Scott was sent for. I believe that it would not require an affidavit to hold Scott to the truth, but after my experience with Darley I trembled in my shoes for fear that Scott when he went on the stand would throw me down like Darley had tried to do. But Scott didn't. He was an honest man. Although their own detective, he says that Frank in the office that Monday afternoon squirmed and fidgeted in his chair, crossed his legs and recrossed them, rubbed his face with his hands, and uttered long sighs. Scott testified that going to the station Tuesday morning Frank was nervous and pale. He testified that before going to the station that morning, while he was in the factory, his eyes were large and excited.

"Waggoner, the man who was placed across the street to watch Frank Tuesday morning, saw him pacing back and forth on the floor of his office, and saw him come to the window and look out at least a dozen times in 30 minutes.

QUOTES FROM SPEECH.

"Right here I want to read you an extract from a speech by a man named Hammond, in prosecuting a man named Dunbar, for the murder of two children. He expressed it better than I do: 'It was because there was a mighty secret in his breast. It was because on overwhelming consciousness of guilt was striving within him. It was because nature was overburdened with a terrible woe. It was because his conscience was rising beneath a stupendous and crushing weight. It was because of the fear and the remorse and the terror in his soul. It was because spectral shadows were flitting before him.'

"The spectral shadow Frank was seeing were the spectres of the dead girl, of the cord, of the blood, of this trial, of the gallows, and the specter of an infamous grave. Guilt forces itself into the speech and conduct and its own betrayer.

"Now let us discuss Conley. Although leaving him out of this case you still have a course of conduct that shows this defendant to be guilty. But before discussing Conley, let's look at some of the others brought into the case by Conley.

"Is Dalton such a lowdown character as he was pictured to you by the able counsel for the defense? Granting that he is, wouldn't that be just the sort of character you would expect to find consorting with Frank in his unspeakably immoral practices.

"If, as Attorney Arnold says, you should not damn Frank because he occasionally went around the ladies, then why should you damn Dalton for the same thing? They took him before he came to Atlanta, and by the testimony of men of whom we know nothing impeached his testimony. We took him after he came to Atlanta, and by the testimony of men who are known in this community we sustained his testimony. Not only did we sustain him by more witnessed than they brought here to impeach him, but we proved by the testimony of a witness who is unimpeached and unimpeachable that he saw Dalton going into the factory with a woman last summer.

CONLEY CORROBORATED.

"Corroboration of Conley? Of course it is corroboration! The very fact that these lawyers who are defending this man failed to attempt to sustain Daisy Hopkins is another corroboration of Conley."

At this point the solicitor took up the response filed with the court by William M. Smith, the attorney for James Conley, in answer to the rule of Judge Roan requiring him to show cause why Conley should not be transferred as a prisoner to the county jail. Among the reasons stated in that document were the following: that the respondent, Jim Conley, admitted that his presence at the trial should be assured; that as a prisoner at police station the respondent would be safe from any attack, being confined in a solitary cell and no one being allowed to see him except his attorneys and those whom he desired to see.

'If it was right for Frank, in jail, not to see anyone except his lawyer and those whom he desired to see,' said the solicitor, "why was it not right for James Conley at police station to be given the same treatment?"

ARNOLD'S MOTION FOR MISTRIAL IS DENIED BY JUDGE ROAN

GROUNDS FOR PETITION.

The solicitor continued reading the grounds of the petition: That neither the respondent nor his counsel requested the transfer; that the respondent believed the transfer to have been planned by persons unfriendly to him and friendly to Frank; that owing to the inadequate inside forces of guards in the jail, it was impossible for the sheriff to know what was occurring within; that the prisoners' food was distributed by trusties, which omitted all the possibility of the respondent being poisoned; that friends of Frank were allowed to pour constantly into the jail, even until far into the night, and that these friends of Frank were on good terms with the trustees; that during the respondent's short time in the jail a goodly number of persons were admitted to see him without his request and against his wishes; that by some of these persons, who the respondent believed to have been in the employ of Frank, the respondent was offered whisky, which, and some whisky; that respondent's life even was threatened; that the respondent believed that if he was kept a prisoner in the jail, some guard, more friendly to Frank, being admitted to see him against his wishes, might afterward swear that he had made certain admissions which he did not make; that while a prisoner in the jail he was lodged among the most desperate criminals confined there, who could and might, in order to benefit themselves, swear that the respondent made a confession which he did not make; that the sheriff had publicly proclaimed that the defendant, Frank, looked him in the eye like an innocent man, and that the sheriff had placed Frank in a whole block of cells to himself where he was protected from everyone whom he did not want to see him.

"There was no reflection on the sheriff, but with the friends of Frank pouring into the jail and offering bribes to the jailer and threatening him, there was good reason why his honor sent him back to the custody of the honorable men who control the police force."

ROSSER OBJECTS.

Attorney Rosser objected, saying that the judge merely had revoked his order.

"You're right! I'm glad you're right one time!"

"That's more than you've ever been," retorted Mr. Rosser.

"No matter the technical law, the effect was to send him back to police headquarters."

Mr. Rosser objected again, and Judge Roan explained his ruling. He said that on motion of the state's counsel and counsel for Conley, he rescinded both of his former orders, allowing Conley without any order against him.

Mr. Dorsey continued: "First he was in the common jail. Then he was sent to police station by order of his honor, Judge L. S. Roan. That the orders were rescind, and except for the determination of the police of the City Atlanta he would have been at liberty when he went upon the stand here or he would have been spirited out of town by those who wished to prevent his damaging testimony being placed before you."

CONLEY NOT IMPEACHED.

"You say that Conley has been impeached? I say that he has not been impeached except by those with their hands in the till of the National Pencil factory. His general character is not impeached, except by the words of the hirelings of the National Pencil factory. Can you say that Conley could be committed this crime, when all you have been able to bring up against him undoubtedly the fact that the state interviewed all of his former employers—is that he has been locked up in police station? He charged disorderly conduct. Is Conley sustained? Yes, abundantly.

"Our proof of the general bad character of Frank sustains Jim Conley. Our proof as to the conduct of Frank sustains Jim Conley. Your failure to examine these hair-brained fanatics, as Arnold calls them without rhyme or reason, sustains Jim Conley. His relations with Miss Rebecca Carson, who is shown to have come to the dressing room with him, sustain Jim Conley.

"Your own witness, Miss Jackson, says that this libertine and rake went into the dressing room and stood with a hardware grin—also sustains Jim Conley. Miss Kitchens, who worked on the fourth floor, and whom you did not produce, by her statement of how he went into the dressing room sustains Jim Conley. Darley and Miss Mattie Smith, as to what they did April 26, sustain Jim Conley. Newman, McCrary, the negro whom you praise and who gets his living from the pencil factory, says that Jim Conley as to where he put those sacks.

"Monteen Stover, who went in just at the minute that Frank was back in the metal room with this poor, unfortunate girl, sustains Jim Conley by the statement of the kind of shoes she wore. Monteen Stover, when she says that nobody was in the office, sustains Jim Conley as to his statement that he heard the footsteps of two people going back.

"Lemmie Quinn, your own dear Lemmie, when his statement is taken with the evidence of Miss Hall and Mrs. Freeman, sustains Jim Conley. Dalton, whose character for the past ten years we have established, sustains Jim Conley about previous Saturdays.

"Daisy Hopkins, by her awful reputation, sustains Jim Conley. The blood on the second floor sustains Jim Conley. The testimony of Holloway, as given in the affidavit to me; and Roots Rogers' statement that the elevator box was unlocked, both sustain Jim Conley. Ivy Jones, whom he met near the factory, sustains Jim Conley. Albert McKnight, who testified as to the time Frank reached home and the time he left, sustains Jim Conley.

"The repudiated affidavit of Minola McKnight, whose attorney let her sign it when he knew he could get her out on a habeas corpus, sustains Jim Conley. The noose in that cord sustains Jim Conley. The existence of the notes, alone, sustains Jim Conley. I become no negro in the history of the race ever wrote a note to cover a crime. The character of words used in the notes, sustains Jim Conley."

ROSSER CLASHES WITH DORSEY.

Mr. Rosser objected, saying that repeatedly and continually in his statement Jim Conley had used the word "did." The record was called for. "I want to see who took the record," said Mr. Dorsey. "It doesn't matter," said Mr. Rosser. "If God Himself had reported it, you wouldn't have believed it. Your mind is gangrened." Mr. Rosser asserted that Jim Conley used the word "did" a hundred times. Mr. Dorsey disputed that he never did use it. The defense read several instances. Mr. Dorsey said, "Call for the reporter," saying that he wanted to see his physiognomy. Judge Harvey Parry, who had reported part of the Conley statement, sustained the defense, and in reply to Dorsey said that the abnormal characters for did and done were not at all alike. Mr. Dorsey continued.

"Leave the language out of it," he said. "Take up the context. The note said she was assaulted when she went back for a natural purpose. And the only toilet Mary knew was in the metal room on the second floor. The fact that the note said the negro 'did' tells by himself showed a conscious effort to limit the crime.

"Frank by his own statement sustains Jim Conley as to the fact that he went to the office, the time of his visit to the Montags, and as to the fact that he carried a folder in his hand.

"Arthur White, according to his statement, borrowed $2 in the afternoon. Where is the entry to show that Frank put down that loan? The fact that there is no entry sustains Jim Conley in his description that Frank's mind was burdened with the problem of disposing of the body.

WHAT ABOUT MINCEY?

"Frank said, 'We found it better to get a voucher book and let everybody sign for what money they got. Notwithstanding that, they failed or refused to produce a record showing that White ever got that money. I'll tell you the reason why he didn't enter it. It was because his mind was conscience were on the crime he had just committed. You tell me that this expert bookkeeper, this Harvard graduate, would have overlooked that. There is only one reason why he did. Conley is sustained by Frank when Conley says he remarked that he had relatives in Brooklyn. When old Jim was on the stand Mr. Rosser asked him about Mincey. Is Mincey a myth, or is he such a diabolical perjurer that it would nauseate the stomach of you gentlemen to produce him before you?"

Turning to Mr. Arnold and Mr. Rosser: "If you weren't going to produce Mincey, why did you parade him before the jury?"

"Gentlemen, the absence of Mincey corroborates Jim Conley.

"Gentlemen, every act of that defendant proclaims him guilty.

"Every word proclaims his knowledge of the death of little Mary Phagan.

"Every circumstance proves him responsible for the murder of that little girl.

"Remarkable? Yes, but true! She died a noble death without a stain on her name. She wouldn't yield her virtue to her superintendent. And he strangled her and killed her.

"In the language of Daniel Webster 'when a jury, through whimsical and unfounded scruples, fails to do its full duty, it violates its oath.'"

Turning to the judge, Solicitor Dorsey said: "Your honor, I have done my duty. I have no apology to make. So far as the state is concerned, you now have the case. I implore the jury from to be without prejudice or bias, this jury sworn to try well and truly Leo M. Frank. I beg that under the law you give them your opinion of the evidence. There can be but one verdict—we, the jury, find this defendant guilty.' Guilty! Guilty."

Solicitor Dorsey concluded his speech at 12 o'clock.

The jury, at the request of Attorney Arnold, was taken from the court room. And Attorney Arnold then laid before the court a motion for a mistrial. He had it written in pencil, and read from it.

"I have a motion to make for a mistrial, and I wish to name the facts on which we make it. We wish to prove every fact included in this motion, unless the court already knows it. We base our motion on the following facts:

"First, at the beginning of this trial counsel for the defendant requested that the court room be cleared.

"Second, when the court refused to rule out evidence relating to women, the audience applauded loudly. The jury was in the court room twenty feet away and heard the applause.

"Third, on Friday, August 22, when court had just adjourned for the day, when the jury was 200 feet north of the court house on South Pryor street, a large crowd cheered the solicitor, crying, 'Hurrah for Dorsey.'

"Fourth, on Saturday, August 23, 1913, when the jury was only 100 feet away from the court house, in the German cafe, a crowd in front of the court house loudly cheered the solicitor as he came out, and afterward a portion of the crowd moved up in front of the cafe and repeated their cheers.

"Fifth, that on the last day of the trial, namely Monday, a large crowd of women had assembled in the court room and taken their seats before court opened; that as Mr. Dorsey entered the court house he was loudly cheered; and that the jury in rooms not more than twenty feet away must have heard the demonstration plainly.

"Sixth, that these demonstrations tended to coerce and intimidate the jury and influence their verdict in the case."

NOT A FAIR TRIAL.

"Your honor, in the event you do not take cognizance of these facts yourself and certify to them, we stand ready to prove them all. The behavior of the spectators throughout this trial has been disgraceful. This man has had anything in the world but a fair trial. I'm not afraid of this crowd, and I hope no one else is, but their demonstrations tend to intimidate the jury."

In reply to Mr. Arnold's argument, the solicitor said:

"First, your honor, we deny there were any shouts of 'Hurrah for Dorsey!' And second, we contend that it is ridiculous to claim they amounted to anything even if they were. You have the right to charge the jury that if they heard any of these cheers, to pay no attention to them, just as you charged the jury to pay no attention to that newspaper headline which you inadvertently allowed them to see."

Attorney Arnold pressed the judge for a statement as to what he would certify to.

Judge Roan: "Of course I heard the cheers this morning, and the cheers Saturday afternoon. But I do not know what was said."

Turning to the solicitor, Attorney Arnold asked:

"Do you deny that there were cheers of 'Hurrah for Dorsey'?"

Solicitor Dorsey: "I heard the noise, but I heard no such cheers as that."

Attorney Arnold: "We want an opportunity, your honor, to prove these facts unless you are willing to certify to them yourself."

Judge Roan: "Whether the jury was influenced this morning, I don't know. What was said Saturday, I don't know. As to the jury being in the German cafe Saturday afternoon, and as to a portion of the crowd moving up in front of the cafe and continuing the demonstration, I don't know."

Attorney Arnold: "Then we have to prove our facts. Where are these men that had charge of the jury? I understand the solicitor demurs to this action."

DORSEY DENIES AND DEMURS.

Judge Roan: "No, I don't understand that he demurs."

Solicitor Dorsey: "Your honor I deny and demur, too."

Attorney Arnold then called as a witness Deputy Sheriff R. V. Davers Th jury was not in court. He was sworn and testified in substance that he was not in charge of the jury on Friday, but was one of the men in charge on Saturday; that the jury was near the German cafe when the applause began and that he heard the applause; that he did not hear cries of "Hurrah for Dorsey;" that the jury could have heard the applause and cheers; that after they went inside the cafe he did not hear any more cheers or applause.

On cross-examination by Attorney Hooper, he testified that the crowd was in front of the court house; that he could not hear the words they said, but only the noises and the handclaps; that no one came inside of the cafe after the jury; that he heard nothing on the outside after they went in; and that he does not know whether Dorsey was in the court house or outside of the court house when cheering commenced.

Attorney Arnold called for the bailiffs who were in charge of the jury on Friday, but none of them was in the court room at that moment, so he swore himself.

ARNOLD TESTIFIES.

Mr. Arnold testified that as Mr. Dorsey left the court room Friday afternoon he heard loud cheering in front of the court house; that on Saturday he asked the solicitor not to leave the court room until the jury had gotten out of hearing, to which the solicitor readily agreed; that after they had waited several minutes, they thought the jury was out of hearing, and the solicitor left the court room with him, Mr. Arnold, walking immediately behind him; that as the solicitor stepped into the street there were loud and excited cheers and cries of "Hurrah for Dorsey;" that in his judgment, these cries could have been heard as far as Alabama street.

On cross-examination by Attorney Hooper, Mr. Arnold testified that he did not know where the jury was at the time, except by information, that he did not hear this trial mentioned by the crowd; and that he did not hear the crowd mention Frank's name.

"At any other time," remarked Mr. Arnold, "I would be glad for my friend Dorsey to get all the approbation he can. But on this occasion I think the conduct of the crowd was shameful. In my judgment, if the jury is composed of men of ordinary hearing, they could have heard what I heard."

When Attorney Arnold finished, a deputy sheriff, Charles F. Huber, who was one of those in charge of the jury on Friday, had come into court, and was put up and sworn.

In answer to Attorney Arnold's first question, he replied that he did not know of the cheers on Friday until Saturday morning.

CROWD TITTER.

When Mr. Huber said this, a titter ran around the court room.

Attorney Arnold whirled and faced the crowd.

"Why, your honor!" he exclaimed, "you can't even keep them quiet now, here in the court room. I wish to state in the record, Mr. Stenographer, that while a witness was being examined in support of this motion, quite a demonstration took place in the court room unfavorable to the defendant. Will your honor certify to that?"

"I will certify to what happened," replied Judge Roan.

When asked what else had charge of the jury on Friday, Mr. Huber named among others Deputy Sheriff Drew Liddell.

"Then," said Attorney Arnold, "I want Mr. Liddell called in. He's not afraid to tell what he knows, although I don't say that's a gentleman."

Attorney Arnold: "Will you decline to certify your honor that I asked you before this trial commenced to clear the court room?"

Judge Roan: "No. I won't decline to do that."

Attorney Arnold: "We want an opportunity, your honor, to complete our showing on this motion. Mr. Liddell and some of the other deputies are not here."

JUDGE OVERRULES MOTION.

Judge Roan replied that he would overrule the motion for a mistrial, charge the jury, and then give the attorneys for the defense an opportunity to summon other witnesses and complete what showing they desired to make on the motion.

The jury then was recalled, and Judge Roan commenced his charge.

During the reading of the charge, it appeared as if Mrs. Leo M. Frank was on the verge of fainting. She became very pallid, and at one time leaned her head back in her chair, closed her eyes, and clasped her throat. Mrs. Rae Frank, impassive, reached over and patted her on the back and she was given a glass of water and several friends of the family fanned her. She revived, but rested her head on her husband's shoulder. For a quarter of an hour during the reading of the charge, Frank's arm was around her and his head rested on hers. Frank betrayed no more emotion than at all other times during the trial.

The jury was very attentive to the charge. There was a slight hubbub in court when Judge Roan finished his charge.

The judge finished at 12:47.

The jury was taken out of court, and across the street to the cafe for lunch. It was stated that immediately after lunch, they would be returned to the court house and that on the fourth floor they would complete their deliberations.

Many of the crowd remained in their seats when court adjourned and the doors were opened.

One woman declared her intention of remaining all afternoon in the hope that the jury would return a verdict.

CONFERENCE HELD.

Immediately after the jury was taken from the room Judge Roan, Attorneys Rosser and Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey held a consultation in an anteroom. It lasted only two or three minutes. At the conclusion of this meeting the attorneys and the judge refused to give out what they discussed. All say it was an important conference, however.

After the jury had gone to lunch, counsel discussed with the court the matter of submitting three papers to the jury. One was the Holloway affidavit, given to the solicitor; the other was the Minola McKnight affidavit, made at the police station and the third was the statement made by Frank to the detectives.

After some discussion, Mr. Dorsey admitted that the first two affidavits had not been properly tendered, and so they will not go to the jury. In the matter of Frank's statement, it was decided to consult the records further and no action was taken on this.

Thirty minutes after the case had gone to the jury, Solicitor Dorsey crossed Pryor street to his office, and on the way over was vigorously cheered by the people who had waited in front of the court house.

Judge Tells Jury They Are the Judges

various facts sustaining, by their consistency, the hypothesis claimed.

To warrant a conviction on circumstantial evidence, the proven facts must not only be consistent with the hypothesis of guilt, but must exclude every other reasonable doubt, hypothesis save that of the guilt of the accused.

AS TO GOOD CHARACTER.

The defendant has introduced testimony as to his good character. On this subject, I charge you that evidence of good character when offered by the defendant in a criminal case is always relevant and material, and should be considered by the jury, along with all the other evidence introduced, as one of the facts of the case.

It should be considered by the jury, and upon it where the balance of the testimony in the case makes it doubtful whether the defendant is guilty or not, but also where such evidence of good character may of itself generate a doubt as to the defendant's guilt. Good character is a substantial fact, like any other fact tending to establish the defendant's innocence, and ought to be so regarded by the jury. Like all other facts proved in the case, it should be weighed and estimated by the jury, for it may render that doubtful which otherwise would be clear.

GOOD CHARACTER AND GUILT.

However, if the guilt of the accused is plainly proved to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt, notwithstanding the proof of good character, it is their duty to convict. But the jury may consider the good character of the defendant, together with the rest of the testimony leaves the question of his guilt doubtful or not, and if a consideration of the proof of his good character, considered along with the evidence, creates a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to the defendant's guilt, then it would be the duty of the jury to give the defendant the benefit of the doubt thus raised by his good character, and to acquit him.

DEFINES "CHARACTER."

The "character" as used in this connection, means that general reputation which he bore among the people who knew him prior to the time of the death of Mary Phagan. Therefore, when the witnesses by which a defendant seeks to prove his good character are put upon the stand, and testify that his character is good, the effect of the testimony is to say that the people who knew him spoke well of him, and that his general reputation was otherwise good. When a defendant does put his character in issue, the state is allowed to attack it by proving that his general reputation is not good, or by showing that the witnesses who have stated that his character is good, have untruly reported it.

Hence, the solicitor general has been allowed to cross-examine the witnesses for the defense who were introduced to testify to his good character. In the cross-examination of these witnesses, he was allowed to ask them if they had not heard of various acts of misconduct on the defendant's part. The solicitor general had a right to ask any question along this line he pleased, in order thoroughly to sift the witnesses, and to see if anything derogatory to the defendant's reputation could be proved by them.

NOT TO BE BASED ON UNSPOKEN WORDS.

The court now wishes to say to you that, although the solicitor general was allowed to ask the defendant's character witnesses these questions as to their having heard of various acts or alleged misconduct on the defendant's part the jury is not to consider this as evidence that the defendant has been guilty of any such misconduct as may have been indicated in the questions of the solicitor general, or any of them, unless the alleged witnesses testify to it. Furthermore, where a man's character is put in evidence, and in the course of the investigation any specific act of misconduct is shown, this does not go before the jury for the purpose of showing affirmatively that his character is bad or that he is guilty of the offense with which he stands charged, but is to be considered by the jury only in determining the credibility and the degree of information possessed by those witnesses who have testified to his good character.

JURY CAN RECOMMEND LIFE SENTENCE.

If you believe beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence in this case that this defendant is guilty of murder, then you would be authorized in that event to say, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty." Should you go no further, gentlemen, and say nothing else in your verdict, the court would have to sentence the defendant to the extreme penalty for murder, to-wit: to be hanged by the neck until he is dead. But should you see fit to do so, in the event you arrive at the conclusion and belief beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence that this defendant is guilty, then, gentlemen, you would be authorized in that event, if you saw fit to do so, to say: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty, and we recommend that he be imprisoned in the penitentiary for life." In the event you should make such a verdict as that, then the court, under the law, would have to sentence the defendant to the penitentiary for life.

DO YOUR HONEST DUTY.

You have heard the defendant make his statement. He had the right to make it under the law. It is not made under oath and he is not subject to examination or cross-examination. It is with you as to how much of it you will believe, or how little of it. You may go to the extent, if you see fit, of believing it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case.

In the event, gentlemen, you have a reasonable doubt from the evidence, or for the evidence and the statement together, or either, as to the defendant's guilt as charged, then give the defendant the benefit of that doubt and acquit him; and in the event you do acquit him the form of your verdict would be: "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty." As honest jurors do your utmost to reach the truth from the evidence and statement as you have heard it here, then let your verdict speak it.

AGAIN SAYS FOR JURY TO SAY.

You will, therefore, observe that this is the rule you will be guided by in determining the effect to be given to the evidence on the subject of the defendant's character. If, after considering all the evidence bro and con, on the subject of the defendant's character, you believe that prior to the time of Mary Phagan's death he bore a good reputation among those who knew him, that his general character is good, you will consider that as one of the facts in the case, and it may be sufficient to create a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, if it so impress your minds and consciences, after considering it along with all the other evidence in the case; and if it does you should give the defendant the benefit of the doubt and acquit him. However, though you should believe his general character was good, still if, after giving due weight to it as one of the facts in the case, you believe from the evidence as a whole that he is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt you would be authorized to convict him.

JURY CAN RECOMMEND LIFE SENTENCE.

If you believe beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence in this case that this defendant is guilty of murder, then you would be authorized in that event to say, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty." Should you go no further, gentlemen, and say nothing else in your verdict, the court would have to sentence the defendant to the extreme penalty for murder, to-wit: to be hanged by the neck until he is dead. But should you see fit to do so, in the event you arrive at the conclusion and belief beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence that this defendant is guilty, then, gentlemen, you would be authorized in that event, if you saw fit to do so, to say: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty, and we recommend that he be imprisoned in the penitentiary for life." In the event you should make such a verdict as that, then the court, under the law, would have to sentence the defendant to the penitentiary for life.

DO YOUR HONEST DUTY.

You have heard the defendant make his statement. He had the right to make it under the law. It is not made under oath and he is not subject to examination or cross-examination. It is with you as to how much of it you will believe, or how little of it. You may go to the extent, if you see fit, of believing it in preference to the sworn testimony in the case.

In the event, gentlemen, you have a reasonable doubt from the evidence, or for the evidence and the statement together, or either, as to the defendant's guilt as charged, then give the defendant the benefit of that doubt and acquit him; and in the event you do acquit him the form of your verdict would be: "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty." As honest jurors do your utmost to reach the truth from the evidence and statement as you have heard it here, then let your verdict speak it.

M'DERMOTT BEGINS HIS DEFENSE IN LOBBY PROBE

Hot Charges and Invitations to "Come Outside" Go Back and Forth

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Representative J. T. McDermott's defense to charges brought out in the house lobby investigation began today with cross-examination of Martin M. Mulhall, author of the expose which pictured the National Association of Manufacturers as the maker and breaker of many congressmen.

Mulhall swore the New York World, which published the story, was now paying him $100 a week. His passages with McDermott's lawyer were fiery and sprinkled with invitations to "come outside." Cross-examination developed that on one recent visit to the World office Mulhall, accompanied by Senator Reed, of the senate lobby committee.

G. G. West, private secretary to McDermott, told the committee he did not know Mulhall, and branded the latter's story of the use of a "secret room" in the basement of the capitol as a headquarters for spies upon congressmen as false.

OLD AGE AND DIABETES

Youth is supposed to favor the patient in disease but this does not appear to be true in Diabetes. In young people the results under Fulton Diabetic Compound are small and the recoveries rare, but in people of middle age and over we begin to look for decrease in the specific gravity and sugar by the twentieth day.

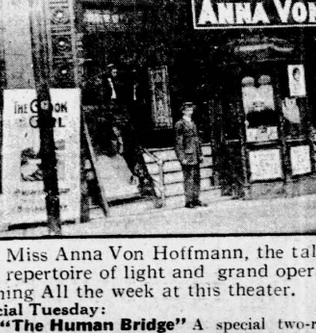

An important case was the vice-president of a California insurance company. He was about seventy-eight when he turned to Fulton's Diabetic Compound for relief. It soon controlled the symptoms and he was living in comfort when the fire and quake of 1906 broke his spirit and he succumbed about his eighty-sixth year.

A recent death in Sacramento, Cal., terminated another case that the Diabetic Compound had prolonged into the seventies. He was in a hospital and was sent home as incurable and there was a sad time on his arrival. He was put on Fulton's Diabetic Compound. In six months he was so improved that he returned to his employment. This was in 1899. Patient was strong and hearty till 1913 when he passed away at a ripe age thirteen years after the critical period that it was believed would terminate his existence.

If you have Diabetes you owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Diabetic Compound before giving up. It can be had at Edmondson Drug company, 11 North Broad street, and 106 North Pryor street, Atlanta, Ga.—(Advt.)

New York's Mayoralty Campaign

The decision of Mayor Gaynor to seek re-election as an independent candidate adds peculiar interest to the approaching municipal campaign in New York. The contest thus becomes three-cornered, with the so-called Fusionists, or anti-Tammany alliance, pitted squarely against the ranks of Boss Murphy, while the eccentric disciple of Epictetus leads a motley remnant of his personal admirers. Whether the Mayor can recruit any considerable following either among wavering voters or those who are hostile to the old machine is conjectural. It seems clear, however, that he is not on the main line of the battle and that logically he can expect scant support from those whose hearts are stanchly enlisted in the great issue of the hour. Men who desire above all else the annihilation of the corrupt Tammany regime will not waste strength on an uncertain and whimsical leader, nor will the Tammany forces warm to a candidate who, ostensibly at least, is fighting them.

There is but one significant issue in the forthcoming New York campaign; it is whether the government of the greatest and most influential American city shall be honest, efficient and truly popular or enslaved to the lowest of low political gangsters. The New York World phrases the question more tersely and concretely: "Shall Murphy have a vote of confidence?" And The World adds aptly enough that no matter whose name may head the official ballot, "the Tammany candidate for Mayor is Charles F. Murphy," and that every vote for the Tammany ticket will be an indorsement of the kind of Government that Murphy administers in Albany no less than the kind of government he administers in New York City."

Indeed, this campaign in so far as it concerns Tammany is of vital interest not only to New York City and New York State but to the entire nation, for it maks a rallying of the forces of civic decency and freedom against those of depravity and ring rule; it stages in peculiarly high light the far-reaching battle that is being waged today in scores of cities and in national politics as well. Its issue is the very issue that was fought out at the Baltimore convention when Woodrow Wilson was nominated for the Presidency; the same that is now being determined in the public's favor through the triumph of tariff revision and currency reform; the same that has led to the discovery and rout of insidious lobbies at Washington; the very issue which every community and every State in the Union must meet and settle aright before they can be really free and secure.

The question in New York as everywhere is simply whether the will of thoughtful, patriotic people can be put into effect, whether practical means to this end can be devised and will be followed. It appears that the Fusionist movement has supplied the necessary means. A committee representing Democrats, Republicans, "Progressives" and independent voters, who realize that New York's one great political need is the overthrow of Tammany, has nominated a ticket which should not fail in its appeal to right-thinking citizens, regardless of ordinary party alignments.

For mayor, they have named John Purroy Mitchell, whom President Wilson recently appointed collector of the port of New York and whose record of service in his city's affairs is clean and impressive. This ticket is rendered especially strong by the name of District Attorney Whitman, who has been nominated to succeed himself. Mr. Whitman displayed magnificent patriotism in refusing to accept the nomination which his own party, the Republican, urged upon him and in finally swinging it into line for the Fusionist ticket.

The Fusion movement has forced Tammany to cast about for the ablest and cleanest man it could persuade to head the organization ticket; has compelled it, as one observer remarks with droll satire, "to do what it hates to do but sometimes has to do, meander to the better element." Its candidate for mayor is Edward A. McCall, now chairman of the public service commission and recently a supreme court justice. As to Mr. McCall's personal worth, there seems to be no doubt. But the very act that he is Tammany's nominee will suffice to turn against him those voters who realize the supreme importance of breaking the machine's power; for, it is a common belief that whoever might be elected mayor as Tammany's choice would, in the long run, be incapable of serving the people's true interests.

"The progress and result of this three-cornered campaign will be watched with keen concern throughout the nation. Its central issue, as we have said, is one that affects all cities, all States and the politics of the entire country—the issue of popular rule against machine rule, of government by the people against government by self-seeking bosses.

In the fall of the year the fancy of the young man turns to what college offers the best tuition in football.

Latin-American Sympathy For the United States' Policy

One of the most significant and hopeful aspects of the Mexican situation today is the apparent unanimity with which Central and South American governments are supporting the efforts of the United States to effect a peaceful solution of this weighty problem. President Wilson's refusal to recognize the lawless Huerta regime and his insistence that the usurper withdraw so that a constitutional order may be established has won the sympathy and moral sanction of practically all Latin America.

This is even more important than the approval and co-operation of the larger Powers such as England, France and Japan; for the interests of these neighboring republics are more directly affected by the policy of the United States; their support of the President's plans is thus a more assuring and potent indorsement and will have a larger influence with the Latin American people.

It was logically to be expected that the responsible governments of Central and South America would approve a policy which discountenances the adventurers and self-seekers who are continually bent upon making trouble. In the outset of his administration, Mr. Wilson made clear his attitude to the Latin republics when he declared, in expressing the hope that "the most cordial understanding and co-operation between the leaders and the peoples of America" might prevail: "Co-operation is possible only when supported at every turn by the orderly processes of just government based upon law, not upon arbitrary or irregular force."

"We can have no sympathy with those who seek to seize the power of government to advance their own personal interests or ambition. We are the friends of peace, but we know that there can be no lasting or stable peace in such circumstances. As friends, therefore, we shall prefer those who act in the interest of peace and honor, who protect private rights and respect the restraints of constitutional provision. Mutual respect seems to us the indispensable foundation of friendship between states, as between individuals."

That is the policy which the administration is now applying to Mexico. It will not recognize Huerta because he has sought to advance his own personal interest and ambition contrary to law and orderly government and in doing so has stooped to the depths of treachery and bloodshed. By putting an end to the Huerta regime the United States will not only solve this particular Mexican problem but it will also do much to strengthen and protect the peace of Latin America as a whole.

Governor Sulzer reminds one more and more of the carbonated article.

Modern Road Building.

It is within years comparatively recent that most American communities have realized the need of scientific and businesslike methods in road building. A generation ago highways were maintained by unskilled and indifferent labor recruited from the countryside among men who worked out their road tax. In the spring of the year when the neighbors had nothing better to do, they would sally forth in picnic fashion, chop the weeds from the side of the road, heap masses of earth in its middle and then go home content. The first heavy rains would make the road more impassable than ever. Little or no attention was given to problems of drainage or to the question of suitable materials. There was no oversight worth the name, no plan, no system. Little wonder that most highways went from bad to worse and that even the people who were earnestly interested in road improvement grew discouraged.

But today road building has taken its place among the practical arts and sciences. Following the great upsweep of popular interest in this cause which was inspired very largely by the automobile, county officials and good roads crusaders began to study efficient methods of highway construction and maintenance. Colleges and universities introduced courses in road building and now no community that is abreast the times will undertake work of this character without the advice of a competent engineer. A writer in the Milwaukee Sentinel well says in this connection:

"The building of roads is vitally a question of proper construction. The building of wagon roads is an engineering problem just as much as the building of a railroad. It involves all the elements of the latter. A good road must be properly located, it must be well constructed, it must be maintained. The first element of a good road is a good foundation, then proper construction; then the road must have sufficient crown to carry off the water to the side ditches. The surface again should be made as impervious as the materials at hand will permit in order that it may shed the water. The surface has been called the roof of the road. It must be properly drained by ditches at the sides. These are problems which require the services of supervision or advice of expert engineers. A railroad would not permit a crowd of local farmers to lay its grade or build its line. The building of a road involves the same engineering problems. Happily, however, the era of inefficiency is past and the era of efficiency of good roads has arrived."

The result of these changed conditions will mean not only better built and better kept roads, with their inestimable value in economic and social life, but also cheaper roads. In highway investments as in all other practical affairs a dollar efficiently spent will yield larger and more lasting results than ten dollars thoughtlessly put out.

Conservation of Natural Gas

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Natural gas, in the opinion of many people, is the most perfect fuel, and one that must be relied upon to supply much of the artificial heat of the future. Yet the wanton waste of this substance, which has been going on unchecked for years, amounts to millions of dollars annually. The matter has lately claimed the attention of the United States bureau of mines. An investigation into the subject resulted in the discovery that natural gas in enormous quantities is being allowed to escape unchecked into the air wherever petroleum is being taken from the wells. The greatest waste is in Oklahoma, Louisiana and California, where the oil industry has been most recently begun. In Oklahoma at present a million cubic feet of natural gas is escaping every day. This has a daily value of $20,000, or $7,500,000 in a single year. In fuel value this waste is equivalent to 1,250,000 tons of the best bituminous coal. The waste in Louisiana seems even more deplorable because that state has no coal resources within its own boundaries. While the natural gas, which might furnish heat in thousands of homes, is being wasted in the air, the citizens of Louisiana are paying for coal which has to be transported for some distance. The waste in California is unfortunate because the gas of that locality is rich in gasoline, which is now the most desirable of the petroleum products and one for which the demand is exceeding the supply.

* * *

The waste in Louisiana last year was equivalent to a loss of nearly $5,500,000, and in California it demonstrations of the conservation of natural resources amounted to $8,000,000. Similar wastes in other states make a grand total of at least $23,000,000 which was lost to the nation last year in natural gas. The bureau of mines, in its effort to check this enormous waste, has already accomplished one of the most notable sources ever given to the world. By the application of methods devised, a checking of at least $13,000,000 of this waste will be secured during the present year.

* * *

Natural gas exists wherever petroleum is found. In their efforts to secure the oil quickly, the operators have been boring through the gas veins which lie over the oil deposits and, without closing the openings thus made, have permitted the gas to escape into the air. The production of oil in Oklahoma during the last few years has been unparalleled and has brought about a perfect frenzy of speculation. Each operator has been obsessed with the idea of taking out oil more rapidly than his competitor. Under the old methods of oil drilling, additional outlay was required to conserve the gas and this the operators were not willing to make.

* * *

At present there is little local demand for natural gas in the state of Oklahoma. If piped into the towns it will bring about five cents a 1ook; but the supply is so largely in excess of the demand that the expense of piping is not regarded as a good investment, and until recently no attention has been paid to its conversation for the future. The bureau of mines met with much opposition from the oil operators who declared that no one wanted the gas while the demand for oil is pressing, and at first there was difficulty in securing wells in which the bureau could demonstrate its improved methods.

* * *

The bureau recognized the fact that while, eventually, there will be a demand for natural gas all over the country, the oil operators cannot afford to wait for it to develop before taking out the oil which is already wanted. Therefore, their methods had to include the means of saving the gas which would not interfere with the present pumping of the oil. So well has this been accomplished that the operators who first opposed it now write to the bureau stating that the new process has materially aided in increasing the oil production.

* * *

Several methods of doing this have been demonstrated. The most popular consists in pumping into the drill a quantity of the soft, slimy the drilling mud to be found in oil fields. This is mixed with the water which is kept around the drill and this mud-laden liquid causes deposits which close up around the well and prevent the escape of the gas. Caps and casings are also provided for the purpose and their use materially lessens the difficulties of oil production. Aside from their first object of conserving the natural gas, the methods advocated by the bureau of mines have reduced the danger of oil drilling at least 50 per cent. They make possible the production of oil from wells which had been abandoned because of great gas pressure.

* * *

Largely through the influence of the bureau of mines, a strong movement tending toward the conservation of natural gas is developing throughout the country. This includes preventive measures in the opening of new wells and remedial measures in closing up wells already in operation from which the gas is escaping. It also provides for greater care in transportation, including well constructed pipes which prevent leakage. It has been claimed that some of the "wild" wells from which gas is escaping in large quantities cannot be controlled or checked. One of the largest of these was in the Caddo oil fields of Louisiana. It was closed under the direction of the bureau of mines by drilling another well about 150 feet from the side of the "wild" well. A passage was opened up between the new well and the "wild" well and water containing a large amount of muddy silt was pumped in. The sediment soon closed up the pores in the sand surrounding the "wild" well, thus shutting off the gas.

* * *

In many of the states laws already have been passed requiring the closing up or capping of every gas well not in use. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and California efficient laws regulating this matter are in operation. The commission on the conservation of natural resources is now recommending a law in Louisiana providing that when the owners of natural gas wells fail to close them, they shall be capped by the state and the owners compelled to bear the expense. In England and France gas wells drilled through a coal mine are required by law to be capped with cement.

* * *

One of the great sources of loss in natural gas is from fire, which in many instances could be prevented. This fire is usually set on fire by the careless use of machines by unprotected fires under boilers and sometimes from the friction of pebbles striking against each other as they are being expelled with great force. In some oil fields great fires consuming both oil and gas have been started by lightning. The gas is usually set on fire before the oil. A few years ago the quenching of a burning oil or gas well was regarded as almost impossible, but now it can be accomplished with proper care and equipment. In the Glenn pool in Oklahoma a 20,000,000-foot well caught fire and was put out after several weeks by a battery of steam boilers which suffocated the flames with steam. An enormous burning well near Caney, Kan., was extinguished by the ingenious device of J. C. McDowell. It consisted of a gigantic hood made of boiler plate. This was raised and dropped into the well by means of cranes and derricks. The first attempt was unsuccessful because the hood was destroyed by a hot sand blast, but the second was fixed firmly in place, thereby shutting out the air and extinguishing the fire.

We are fanatical enough in our admiration of the president as it is, but we'll go the limit, and say, without fear of successful contradiction, that he could umpire the last game for the pennant, umpire it in the home town of one team, and still cause no complaint from the visitors.

Our Own Travelogues.

Sid: There's a big forest fire, the streams are all dry, people are all riding in autos instead of walking (we got two lifts, one from young Mr. Tyl), the youth and beauty of the land are wasting their time on golf instead of improving themselves at tennis—in short, we view with alarm.

THE WARMAKERS

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Accursed, therefore, are the warmakers, for they shall be called the children of the devil.

There is no truth that should be seared with Sinaitic fire upon the minds of Americans so important as this: That in our present relations with Mexico or Japan, or in any thinkable future relations, a better way than war may be discovered to bring about justice and harmony.

When Demos is the ruler he is no better than kings.

The warmakers are with us. Among them are these:

The rash, ignorant and adventurous youth. They are filled with the glamor of history, war-soaked and intoxicating. They see only the thrill of the game; they do not realize the horror of it.

Certain business interests. They would improve the value of their foreign holdings, or make gain by supplying armament or supplies to the army, or in some way feather their own nests with the profits of organized murder and rapine.

Certain politicians who see advancement for themselves in arousing the war lust of the populace.

The army and navy, tired of idleness and eager for advancement into dead men's shoes.

The people at large, who are easily carried away by a wave of war enthusiasm, who sweep aside the wisdom and counsel of intelligent and humane statesmen and lunge into any bloody excess where fanatic and mistaken patriotism is opposed only by reason and justice.

War means graft piling up mountain high.

It means universal waste and extravagance.

It means millions of jobs for the unfit.

It means a thousand hungry hands thrust into the national exchequer.

It means the prostitution of "patriotism" from a high devotion to the public service to the wild violence of brute pugnacity.

Surely a country as civilized as the United States of America can never descend to the snarling methods of the Balkan peninsula.

Urban Romance

Sweet Annabelle's father
Had made such a pother
Into Percy's resources to grope,
That Percy upbraided
His fate, then persuaded
The fair Annabelle to elope.

A taxi he hired,
When pa had retired,
Annabelle was to steal down the stair
(She had him repeat it)
And then they would "beat it"
To a beautiful place—oh, somewhere!"

Alas! He was heady
And she was not ready,
So Percy, poor lad, had to wait,
While the taxicab meter
(There's nothing that's fleeter)
Ticked on at a terrific rate.

He had but a fiver;
The taxicab driver
Demanded his money to see.
Scene. Great indignation.
A drive to the station.
A ten dollar fine plus the fee!

In shame and in sorrow,
Percy phoned on te morrow:
"'Sthat you, Annabelle?" "'was her pa,
Who said: "While you've tarried
Annabelle has got married,'
Yep, the taxi chap. Fine son-in-law!"

Quips and Quiddities

There is a delicious flavor about this story of a Virginia lady married to a man who, though uniformly unsuccessful in his hunting trips, boastingly spoke of his "killings."

One day, returning from a trip with the usual accompaniment of an empty bag, it occurred to him that his wife would make fun of him if he returned without even one proof of his oft-boasted skill. So he purchased a brace of partridges to deceive his trusting spouse. As he threw them on the table in front of her he observed:

"Well, my dear, you see I am not so awkward with the gun after all."

"Dick," replied the wife, turning from the birds with a grimace, after a brief examination, "you were quite right in shooting these birds today; tomorrow it would have been too late."

"I understand, Harry," remarked the acquaintance, "that your wife has started to practice economy. The missus was saying something about it last night."

"Yes," replied Harry; "she is practicing economy all right, and if your wife is thinking of taking a turn in the same direction, you had better get busy and head her off before it is too late."

"I don't understand you, Harry," said the acquaintance, with a perplexed expression. "I should regard economy as something to commend."

"Yes," was the smiling rejoinder, "but not when your wife is buying your shirts at three for a dollar so that she can get herself a twenty-dollar hat."

Uncle Toby was aghast at finding a strange darky with his arm around Mandy's waist.

"Mandy, tell that niggah to take his ahm 'way from round 'round yo' waist," he indignantly commanded.

"Tell him yo'self," said Mandy. "He's a puffect stranger to me."

An English army veteran who had lost an arm in feudal times, was very prejudiced against the Irish in general. One day he exhibited the wound to a party of soldiers, which suggested to an Irishman present the question:

"How did you come to lose the arm, may I ask?"

"It was this way: There was a drop of Irish blood in that arm, so I cut it off myself."

"Faith, 'tis a pity it wasn't your neck," retorted Paddy.

An Irishman who wasn't much of a hunter went out to hunt, one day, and the first thing he saw to shoot at was a bird sitting saucily on the top of a fence. He blazed away and then walked over to pick up the victim. What he happened to find there was a dead frog, which he raised at arm's length, looking at it with a puzzled air. Finally he remarked:

"Well, but ye was a deuce of a foine looking bird before Oi blew the fithers off o' ye!"

Meeting a negro, a certain southern gentleman asked him how he was getting on.

The negro assumed a troubled look, and replied: "Oh! so far as physicality goes, I'm all right. But I sure do have troubles wif mah wife."

"Well, Sam, I'm sorry to hear that. What seems to be the matter?"

"She thinks money grows on trees, I reckon. All de time she keeps pesterin' me foh pinch o' change. If it ain't a dollah, it's a half or a quarter she wants."

"What on earth does she do with the money?"

"I dunno. Ain't nevah gib her none yet."

BOY HURT BY FALL OFF BICYCLE MAY SUCCUMB

Young McAfee Was Thrown When Wheel Caught in Car Track

Charles McAfee, fourteen-year-old son of Mrs. Lucinda McAfee, of 12 Capitol avenue, was lying at Grady hospital Monday still unconscious from a fracture of the skull sustained Sunday morning when he fell from a bicycle. Although he has never regained consciousness since the fall, the physician in charge states that a slight improvement can be seen in his condition. The hope for his recovery, however, is slight.

His fall occurred shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday morning while riding along Peachtree near Baker street. He was accompanied by his twin brother. The boys had left home only a few minutes before, telling their mother they were going to Sunday school. But instead they went to the home of friends on Fraser street and securing the loan of bicycles, started on a morning ride.

They were going down Peachtree at a good rate of speed when near Baker street Charley, who had wheeled on the car track to avoid a passing automobile, attempted to gain the side of the street. A wheel of his bicycle caught in the car track flange and threw him heavily to the ground on his head. He fell directly in front of another automobile driven by A. C. Bromberg, which passed over his prostrate and motionless body.

The boy was immediately placed in an ambulance and rushed to Grady hospital. It was found that he had sustained a fractured skull, besides numerous bruises and scratches, none of which were serious. Mr. Bromberg was absolved of all blame when physicians announced that the fracture was sustained by the fall from the bicycle.

His twin brother, Harry, who was with him and saw the accident is heartbroken. He and Charley have been inseparable since early childhood and always dressed alike.

WILSON TO READ HIS MESSAGE ON TUESDAY UNLESS HUERTA ACTS

"Yes, the message is written and will be delivered tomorrow if it is then true. But events may occur to make what it states inaccurate by tomorrow."

A COMPLETE CASE.

It is evident from the way the president discussed the message that he has made a great effort to make out a complete case on the Mexican situation, but within reasonable limits of space. That is, if compelled to present his views and suggestions to the people of this country and the world, he declares to do it in a way that will enable him to reach the greatest number. To that end he has boiled the document down far as he could without fading out any of the essentials. The only verbatim quotations in it will be the propositions presented to Huerta by John Lind and the reply of Huerta.

As the case stands now, in regard to Huerta's reply to Lind, there is nothing for the United States to say to Huerta. The president says Huerta's reply is conclusive or at least definitive. Therefore, this will be nothing of the kind suggested by recent dispatches from the city of Mexico in the way of an answer from President Wilson to Huerta, although the dispatches said Huerta expected such an answer. If Huerta waits for that he will get it in the form of the president's message to congress tomorrow.

NO APPEAL TO EUROPE.

In spite of the hearty support all the foreign governments seem to be ready to give the president in his efforts for peace in Mexico, the president said today he had caused no appeal to be made in any of those governments. The United States had simply stated the facts to the various governments of the world. Their course of action was of their own unsolicited choice. He had read the news from Paris that the French government had notified Huerta that it could not at this time receive De La Barra, the special envoy sent to France by Huerta, but this was the action of France based upon its knowledge of the situation and not upon any request from the United States.

Finally, the president told his callers there is nothing pending at this end of the line to alter his message to congress or to stop it. All that depended upon what occurred at the city of Mexico. While John Lind has not been recalled and is still supposed to be doing his best to negotiate, some of the president's visitors came away with the impression that after the president's message is presented to congress Mr. Lind's labors will be over, as then all communications between the United States and the Huerta government of Mexico will be at an end.

That foreign powers generally are exercising their good offices in Mexico City, pressing Huerta to yield to the American proposals, now is openly admitted by administration officials. When questioned today whether such participation by European governments in the policies of the western hemisphere was considered an infringement upon the Monroe doctrine it was pointed out by administration officials that the United States did not construe an act of friendship as impairing at any time the Monroe doctrine.

It was shown also that the activities of foreign governments were not due to any request by the United States for assistance, but that this government had decided upon a policy of keeping the nations of the world generally informed of the steps being taken to bring about peace, leaving it to the powers to do spontaneously what seemed expedient.

HYGIENE CONGRESS OPENS IN BUFFALO

(By Associated Press.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Welcomed by nation, state and city, the fourth international congress on school hygiene, the first held on American soil, was formally opened today with an attendance of over 2,000 scientists and educators from nearly every civilized nation.

Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson, representing the federal government, extended the nation's hand of friendship to the visiting delegates. Dr. John H. Finley, commissioner-elect of the department of education, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the state, and Mayor Louis P. Fuhrmann, on behalf of the city.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard university, and president of the congress, responded.

INTERESTING DECISIONS BY COURT OF APPEALS MONDAY

Cooper and Gibson Verdicts Are Reversed

The court of civil appeals handed down two decisions Monday, both of which are of interest to the legal profession and which have a human interest side, too. In both cases the ruling of the lower court was reversed.

In the case of Cooper vs. State, the evidence showed that Cooper was walking along a road when he saw a revolver lying in the road. He picked it up and was arrested and convicted for carrying concealed weapons. The lower court held that the evidence showing Cooper found the weapon in the road was inadmissible; and on this ground the reversal was granted.

The case of Gibson vs. State, coming up from Brooks county, resulted in the ruling that embezzlement cannot be found when money is taken from one state fund to be put into another.

In this case Young Gibson was county treasurer, succeeding his deceased father. On coming into office an examination of his father's books showed a certain amount of money had been embezzled. In trying to protect his father's memory he took tax returns from the current year and applied them to the previous one when his father had defaulted.

The court of civil appeals held that Gibson committed no crime in transferring the state's money from one year to another, as in both cases the money was always the state's property.

Gibson was convicted in the lower court.

Fred Stewart's Cat Ad Brought Many Calls From Atlanta Women

Most of the ladies in Atlanta are very fond of cats, according to Fred S. Stewart, of the show company bearing his name. Anyway about a hundred of them took upon themselves to see that he should not harm the felines for which he advertised in The Journal Sunday.

Some of the ladies called the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and told the officers that they knew Mr. Stewart had designs on cats or he would not have advertised for so many. Some accused him of being a vivisector. Others called Mr. Stewart himself and made his ears burn, and came near to melting the telephone wires with their opinion of any man who would advertise for cats.

Many ladies thought bad boys had stolen their pet tabbies and sold them to Mr. Stewart. All kinds of inquiries came pouring in, asking that everything from a pure black cat with a kind expression to a striped Maltese be saved for its owner.

Mr. Stewart spent a rather worried Monday resulting from that advertisement. He was not overwhelmed with cats. Everybody thought the ad a joke and as a result he received only thirty cats. So his worry did not result from being overwhelmed with cats, but from being overwhelmed with warnings not to harm cats.

Mr. Stewart says he intends no harm to the cats. He accepted no cat that even looked like a lady's pet, and would not take young kittens nor old cats with kittens. He wishes to assure everyone that he has no heinous intentions in regard to the cats he has, but will treat them humanely, perhaps better than they have been treated before, and besides that will release them later.

Mr. Stewart also says he does not want any more cats. The advertisement named the hours from 8 to 10 o'clock, and Mr. Stewart will not take another cat.

MISSISSIPPI ASKS FOR EXTRADITION OF OLIVER

Claims That A. B. Oliver Is L. C. Harding, an Escaped Convict

Through requisition papers from the state of Mississippi asking for the person of A. B. Oliver, who is now serving a term on the Georgia gang, an interesting story has been brought before the public again.

Oliver was sent up on the charge of bigamy, his arrest following a series of interesting occurrences. In 1909, Oliver went to Climax, a small town in Decatur county, and started business operations on an extensive scale. He was bright, good-looking and energetic, and seemed to have a great deal of capital. He bought farming lands, a mercantile business, a big automobile and later started a bank.

In the meantime he had married the daughter of a well known man of that section, and had secured the confidence of everyone in the community.

It was not long, however, before the bank failed, about $100,000 being lost.

The depositors then became suspicious and set out to learn just who Oliver was.

According to statements, they claimed that Oliver was L. C. Harding, a man who had escaped from the Mississippi penitentiary.

As Harding had a wife, Oliver was tried for bigamy, having married while at Climax, and soon after his conviction, Mrs. Oliver married again.

Oliver, who is now working on the Lee county chaingang, will have finished his sentence in a short while; and is getting ready to fight against extradition to Mississippi.

He says that he is not Harding, but Harding's twin brother, and that Harding himself is now somewhere in South America.

He has affidavits and other documents to present to the governor, and will tell an interesting story at the hearing.

THEATRES

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

Svengali, the sensational New York vaudeville feature, will be one of the attractions on the bill of stars that will furnish entertainment at the Forsyth this week. Svengali, with assistants, will offer one of the most interesting and puzzling novelty acts that has yet been brought to Atlanta. It is wonderful from start to finish, and it is one of the great drawing cards of up-to-the-minute vaudeville. Fred Bond and Miss Fremont Benton, two of the most distinguished of the legitimate stars who have come into Vaudeville, will be the star playlet feature of the bill. These clever entertainers will have the support of their own company presenting one of the strongest and one of the most original comedy sketches known.

The Meredith sisters, in new songs; Lewis and Dody, in comedy that is real; Joe Flynn, the monologuist; the Four Regals, in a wonderful gymnastic novelty, and Claude Golden, the cord expert, are also among the entertainers.

Kinemacolor comes to the Grand today, and will be a permanent feature at the house. The exhibitions will be from 2:30 until 10:30 each day—5 cents admission from opening until 7 p. m. and 10 cents from 7 until closing time.

Kinemacolor is the natural color motion picture. That it is wonderful is known in Atlanta, for two years ago the coronation of King George was seen at the Forsyth during a week by more than 18,000 people. Jake Wells has secured the southern rights of the kinemacolor service and subjects will be changed every other day. In addition there will be the very best first run pictures, changed every day. On Monday and Tuesday the kinemacolor subjects will be "Pested by Fire," a real drama, and "Life in a Maori Village, and Egyptian Sunsets." On Wednesday and Thursday the great kinemacolor feature, "The Scarlet Letter," will be the offering, and the last two days of the week will be devoted to "Other People's Children" and 'Scenes on New York Beaches."

The beauty of kinemacolor will be a wonderful drawing card and there is every indication that the Grand with all of its many comforts and conveniences will be one of the most popular places in all the world within a few days.

Surprising How Many Women Are Selecting Their Fall Suits These Days

Time was when it would have been considered "rushing the season" to select a fall suit in August.

But customs change with time and what was impracticable a few years ago is a very sensible thing to do now---and so smart women who concern themselves with the new styles while they are still new are turning to the well-filled crystal cases of our suit department and are choosing with a fine sense of satisfaction their fall suits.

That choosing with such satisfaction might not be possible in every store at this season we will not argue, but that it IS possible here is a matter you may prove by a few minutes' visit to the Suit Department.

The style tendencies for fall are well developed now, there is nothing to wait for in that respect---and they are novel and interesting and varied.

Novel and interesting from many viewpoints. There are draped cutaway coats, there are cutaway coats that button close up to the neck, there are cutaway coats with "dug out" collars and others that have the semblance of a blouse---all different from styles we have known.

And coats are to be longer this fall; any measure 38 to 42 inches, but---and to the pleasure of the woman of slight stature—often the cutaway effect robs them of the appearance of being long.

Never were styles more generally becoming!

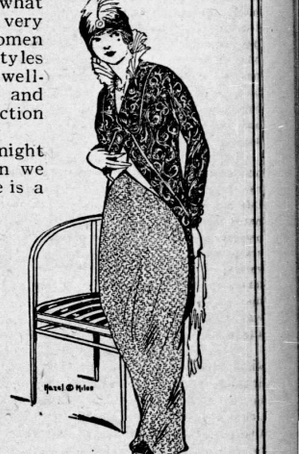

Many of the skirts are slashed, many are draped in one way and another.

Materials show the new scheme of things. Soft finished fabrics are prominent, velour cloth self-striped, crepons, ratine-striped fabrics and bayadere poplins, trimmings often take a contrasting shade and again the use of embroidered velvet is pronounced on collars, cuffs and skirts.

What are the colors?

See with your own eyes! Naming the mahogany, cinnamon, prune, amethyst, Copenhagen and navy shades is but poor apology for their richness and beauty.

This is a worthy display of the new suit fashions, one that a woman may approach with the confidence that the suit she selects will be an authentic style.

Socialist Wife of Gotham Millionaire Stranded penniless

(By Associated Press.)

LIMA, Ohio, Aug. 25.—Refusing to report the theft of her purse to the police and to accept money from friends, Rose Pastor Stokes, of New York, Socialist speaker and settlement worker, is "stranded" tonight in a local hotel with only 35 cents and her baggage in her possession. She is awaiting a reply to a message sent to her husband, J. Phelps Stokes, a New York millionaire.

This afternoon Mrs. Stokes left her hotel to confer with Socialists. When she returned, $90 which she had left in her room, was missing. She said she knew who took the money, but added that she would not prosecute the thief.

"What is money to me compared to the ruination of his life," she said. "I will not prosecute. It would only tend to make him a confirmed thief."

WOULD STRETCH LAW ON DISPATCHING MILITIA

Conference of War Department Officials and Militia Leaders to Be Held

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—More liberal interpretation of the constitutional provision which in the past has been accepted as prohibiting the dispatch of militia to foreign soil will be sought in the coming conference between the staff officers of the war department and the officers of the militia of the various states. Denial was made that there was any significance in raising the question at this time. A desire to make the regular army and the militia a more effective combination, it was declared, prompted the department's actions.

Military lawyers are said to be convinced that authority is given by the constitution for the employment of militia in foreign countries to "execute the laws of the nation." They are not all agreed in this definition of the fundamental law, and a debate is expected.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMEN WEAVE RUGS FOR MRS. WILSON

The bedroom of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington will soon be adorned with rugs, druggets and portieres woven by two old women living at Elkin, N. C., Miss Caroline McHargue, who is seventy-four years old, and her elder sister, Mrs. Martha Walker, seventy-six years old.

The sisters are expert dyers and weavers, and they use the old time process of dyeing with barks and herbs and weave on an old-fashioned hand loom, preparing the thread with card and spinning wheel.

In the loom room of the two women the atmosphere of the past still lingers. There may be found everything pertaining to the manufacture of homespun materials, wheels, skeys, skarnes, clock reels, quilting wheels, swifts, bales of thread and yarn. There also may be found piles of new and old carpets and bed coverlets woven in fanciful geometric designs such as formed the favorite floor and bed coverings of our ancestors and are still in use in the homes of many country folk today.

The machines employed by these two women are none of your new fangled factory made devices. Their shuttles and spools are made by hand; both warp and weft are spun in their home; nor do they use the fleeting dyes which may be purchased ready mixed today, but dye their work in the juice of the old time herbs, and no new juice colored yarn can equal either in color or durability the herb dyed homespun, hard twisted yarn made by these two women on their spinning wheels.

The old-fashioned hand loom is today more or les of a curiosity, and there are many of the younger generation who have neevr seen one. Much skill on the part of the weaver is required to operate one of these looms, and even with the most expert weaver the production is slow.

The affectionate regard which the Elkin women have for their spinning wheels and looms was at one time found among all southern spinners and weavers. Their machines are heirlooms that have been handed down from generation to generation, and they are treasured by the two elderly sisters like relics. Indeed they will readily assure an interested visitor that they have a feeling of affection for their looms that is akin to the love for a human companion.

There are three distinct motions in hand weaving.

First is the forming of the shed, that is, seperating the threads of the warp, as the threads which run throughout the length of the finished fabric are called. These are wound upon the warp beam and placed in the loom in two or more series. Between them the weft or filling is passed. The second stage is the passing of the shuttle containing the bobbin or filling through the shed so formed, either by hand or mechanical means. The third is the beating up of this thread against the one which preceded it. The process of weaving is simply a continued repetition of these movements in the order named.

The piece prepare
And order every slender thread with care;
The webs enwraps the beam, the reed divides
While through the widening space the shuttle glides,
Which their swift hands receive, then poised with lead
The swinging weight strikes close the inserted thread.

And so these women work. Stitch in, stitch out, warp and woof, the pattern grows.—New York Sun.

Are You Properly Introduced?

When you wish to gain the ear of an important personage you know how much it helps to have a properly worded letter of introduction.

Now let's apply the same rule to broad business.

The nearest friend to Mr. and Mrs. Consumer is Mr. Retailer.

Mr. Retailer has many solicitations for introductions, but he wants to feel sure Mr. and Mrs. Consumer will approve of Mr. Manufacturer.

Mr. Retailer communicates with Mr. and Mrs. Consumer through advertising in The Journal.

He knows no better way for manufacturers to pique the curiosity and arouse the enthusiasm of buyers than through the same medium.

He is willing to do the rest.

A co-operative campaign in The Journal between merchant and manufacturer brings results in short order.

The Evening Story

EARNING HER WAGE

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Werner.)

Elsie Curtis sat at the window of her room typewriting. It was 2 o'clock and at 2:30 there was a matinee to which she was going. She had a new hat and gown to wear, and her head was full of them and the matinee. She loved the theater, she loved her good clothes, she loved everything, indeed, save her work. But in order to enjoy the theater and possess the good clothes she must work.

Elsie typed for Miss Brooke, and Miss Brooke wrote stories. Elsie's ideas on the subject of Miss Brooke's productivity and her own were in a certain sense socialistic. Miss Brooke earned at one end of the scale and she at the other. Miss Brooke thought in terms of dollars and she pounded out copy in terms of cents. Yet Miss Brooke's thoughts would have been more or less ineffective without the clever elucidation produced by her typing. Miss Brooke could not type. And her writing was that of any person whose mind moves faster than her muscles. No editor in the world could ever have picked out more than one word in five of that intricate script which Elsie had learned to read like so much print.

Elsie believed herself to be indispensable to Miss Brooke. She had worked for her so long that she had every detail of the business by heart. She had learned al of Miss Brooke's tricks of trade, modes of expression, until she felt that if she ever had time she could dash off a story which would win acceptance anywhere. However, she never had the time, for she was always either working or playing. Miss Brooke kept her pretty busy. All the rest of the time she amused herself.

For some time now amusements had been encroaching upon business. The theater, the parks, young company lured Elsie continually. She had less and less time for her work, but the work must go on just the same. She hurried her work and loitered over her amusements. She could make her fingers fly, and she let them go at the speed limit of accuracy—and beyond. Imperfections blotted her copy and Miss Brooke began to find fault. Elsie listened carelessly. Let Miss Brooke grumble! Elsie was not afraid. She was too valuable to Miss Brooke to be risking much, and she had something to gain—added moments for a novel or a chat. Miss Brooke could not find anybody to take her place. It would take a year at least to break in another girl.

On this particular afternoon she was more reckless than usual. Her typewriter table stood at the open window of her upstairs room, and she could look down into an enormous syringa bush, which not only charmed the eye by its bloom, but sent wave after wave of sweetness up to her nostrils. It was May and everything was young and bright and full of the joy of life. Earth, sky, syringa bush, tenderly greening foliage were kin to her and her girlish senses rioted with them in an abandon of delight. All outdoors urged her to come—come, and here she was fast before an old typewriter, with a lot of copy that must be handed in before the day ended.

Rebellion seamed up in Elsie—rebellion against Miss Brooke, against the necessity which made her earn wages, against the whole system of life.

Click—click, click went the keys, ting went the bell as the carriage flew back and forth, and page after page of messy transcript fluttered to the floor.

"Hoo—oo!" Some one was calling from below. Elsie leaned on the sill and looked down into a laughing, upturned face.

"I'll be right down, Marjory. Just let me put on my hat."

She sprang from the chair, nearly upsetting the typewriter, caught her new hat from the bed and flew to the glass to put it on. It was pretty and becoming, but as she stabbed it through with a hatpin Elsie remembered enviously that Miss Brooke was probably wearing one that cost three times as much.

"Her old copy can just wait till I get back to it," she thought. "I've put her off twice successfully, and I guess she won't make any great fuss if I have to put her off again. A day sooner or later isn't going to make any great difference with one story, I'm certain."

"Lovely and white, isn't it?" Marjory said, as she tucked a sprig into her belt. "I saw you were working for dear life. How do you get on with Miss Brooke, Elsie? Isn't she dreadfully upstartish? I can't understand how she can write stories. Why, she doesn't look a mite different from you and me."

"She isn't any different, Marjory. But don't let's talk about her. I want to forget her and everything else unpleasant for the whole afternoon."

On their way to the theater they stopped at a confectioner's and Elsie bought a box of chocolates. How good it was to be twenty-two, wearing a new hat and sitting out a spring afternoon at a charming new play! There was only one thing to spoil Elsie's happiness, and that was the thought of the untidy work with which she must presently confront Miss Brooke. But by the time the first act was over she had lost herself completely in the play. As the curtain went down she sat staring at it as if she still saw the scene it had just hidden, her eyes big and bright with emotion, the hero's last passionate utterance repeating itself in her ears.

"She doesn't understand, and I can't make her understand. I've tried, indeed, to impress upon her the fact that life is something more than one long matinee; that each one owes a duty to her fellows as well as to herself. And a duty to her work. After all, life is work. And the more one gets out of one's work, the more one enjoys life."

Elsie started. Her heart started, too, and got into her throat with one cruel, headlong leap. For that was Miss Brooke who was speaking just behind her. And she had never dreamed that

Miss Brooke would come to the matinee.

"Elsie is no longer a very young girl," went on Miss Brooke, in that soft, carrying voice of hers. "But she still has a young girl's utter lack of responsibility. And that, you know, is always so hard to deal with. I've had to find a good deal of fault with her of late, but instead of taking more pains she takes less. She dashes off her copy apparently at lightning speed. Her one thought seems to be to get it off her mind and out of her hands as quickly as possible. You see, auntie, she hasn't got to the point where she realizes that it is work. Neither does she realize that in cheating me she cheats herself. These little things, these little every-day errors in the way of honor, leave such indellible impressions. And too many such impressions spoil any character. I learned it through my writing. Writing is the hardest work in the world, the most heartbreaking, the most inspiring, the most uplifting.

"You know how I have slaved to get where I am today. You know how I've lost sleep and given up every pleasure. Why, even now a matinee is a great event for me. And I wouldn't be here now if I hadn't stopped in with you on our way to that club meeting. But enough of me and just a little more about Elsie. I'm fond of her, I long to keep her on, but I'm afraid, auntie, that I can't keep her. She is too careless. I can't risk my own literary reputation by continuing to send on the copy she turns out. She has a piece of work in her hands now which I am going to let decide for me. If it is up to the mark I shall keep her. If not I shall let her go. I have a trusty applicant for her place and I can't afford——" The curtain went up. "Can't we stay through this second act, auntie?"

A deeper voice answered:

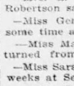

"I think we had better go to the club."

They went out quietly. Elsie turned her head and saw them go. An alluring heroine was holding the centre of the stage, but Elsie looked down at her hands, instead—her wayward hands that were capable of such good work and turned out such poor work. She was thinking over what she had just heard Miss Brooke say. There had been revelation in the words uttered unconsciously in her presence. It came to her that her work was her very self, that she was not indispensable, that all the matinees in the world could not repay her for losing her job, and with it the brightness of her young honor.

She touched Marjory.

"You stay on, Marjory. I must go. I've got to go. Don't ask any questions. Just let me go."

She left Marjory staring openmouthed at such unwarranted behavior. She rushed out into the spring day. As its light fell upon her she seemed to be bathed in a new consciousness of self and of the whole system of toil for wage. And with light heart and feet she hurried toward home and her waiting task.

SUCCESS IN MEDICINE

Good doctors succeed, and among them are the world's greatest benefactors; poor doctors drop out, as they should. Good proprietary medicines succeed, and the homes of the masses are blessed by them. Poor medicines drop out, as they should. The American women are neither gullible or foolish, they recognize the value of such standard remedies as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than thirty years has been the standard remedy for female ills and complies with all conditions of the Pure Food and Drugs law.—(Advt.)

Little Stories for Bedtime

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Jenny Wren is a busybody. Yes, sir, she certainly is a busybody. If there is anything goes on in her neighborhood that she doesn't know about it isn't because she doesn't try to find out. She is so small and spry that it is hard to keep track of her, and she pops out at the most unexpected times and places. Then, before you can say a word, she is gone.

And in all the Old Orchard or on the Green Meadows there is not to be found another tongue so busy as that of Jenny Wren. It is sharp sometimes, but when she wants it to be so there is none smoother. You see, she is a great gossip, is Jenny Wren, a great gossip. But if you get on the right side of Jenny Wren and ask her to keep a secret she'll do it. No one knows how to keep a secret better than she does.

Now, how it happened nobody knows, but it did happen that when Peter Rabbit came home to the dear old Briar Patch, bringing Mrs. Peter with him, Jenny Wren didn't hear about it. Probably it was because the new home which she had just completed was so carefully hidden that the messengers sent by Peter to invite all his friends to call didn't find it, and afterward she was so busy with household affairs that she didn't have time to gossip. Anyway, Peter had been back some time before Jenny Wren knew it. She was quite upset to think thta she was was quite upset to think that she was consoled herself with the thought that she had been attending strictly to her duties, and now that her children were able to look out for themselves, she could make up for lost time.

Just as soon as she could get away she started for the old Briar Patch. She wanted to hear all about Peter's adventures in the Old Pasture and to meet Mrs. Peter. But, like a great many other busybodies, she wanted to find out all she could about Peter's affairs, and she thought that the surest way to do it was not to lett Peter know that she was about until she had had a chance to use her sharp little eyes all she wanted to. So when she reached the old Briar Patch she didn't make a sound. It didn't take her long to find Peter. He was sitting under one of his favorite bramble bushes smiling to himself. He smiled and smiled until Jenny Wren had to bite her tongue to keep from asking what was pleasing him so.

"He looks tickled almost to death over something, but very likely if I should ask him what it is he wouldn't tell me," thought Jenny Wren. "I guess I'll look around a bit first. I wonder where Mrs. Peter is."

So, leaving Peter to smile to his heart's content, she went peeking and peering through the old Briar Patch. Of course, it wasn't a nice thing to do, not a bit nice. But Jenny Wren didn't stop to think of that. By and by she saw something that made her flutter all over with excitement. She looked nad looked until she could sit still no longer. Then she hurried back to where Peter was sitting. He was still smiling.

"Oh, Peter Rabbit, it's perfectly lovely!" she cried.

Peter looked up quickly, and a worried look chased the smile away. "Hello, Jenny Wren! Where did you come from? I haven't seen you since I got back," said he.

"I've been so busy that I haven't had time to call before," replied Jenny. "I know what you've been smiling about, Peter, and it's perfectly splendid. Has everybody heard the news?"

"No," said Peter. "Nobody knows it but you, and I don't want anybody else to know it just yet. Will you keep it a secret, Jenny Wren?"

Now, Jenny was just bursting with desire to spread the news, but Peter

"No," said Peter, "nobody knows it but you."

looked so anxiously that finally she promised that she would keep it to herself, and she really meant to. But, though Peter looked greatly relieved as he watched her start for home, he didn't smile as he had before. "I wish her tongue didn't wag so much," said

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

By the Countess of Blankshire.)

LONDON, Aug. 25.—A pretty danseuse, who has always been a great public favorite, is shortly to appear as an actress in one of Sir J. M. Barrie's pieces.

There was an exciting episode at a popular seaside resort the other day. A fair bather was joyously disporting herself when a flannel led youth with a camera came along the beach. He was about to take a snapshort of the beautiful mermaid when he was collared from behind and unceremoniously ducked in the sea. The lady's husband had witnesed his evident admiration of the bather and there and then gave him the order of the bath.

Notwithstanding all statements to the contrary, it is well understood in diplomatic circles that the relations between America and Japan in reference to the California land question are decidedly unfriendly. The Japanase government are believed to be preparing a very strong note on the subject for presentation to the American government. Japan is known to be building warships as fast as they can. It may have been forgotten that she has other grounds for complaint against America. When the latter annexed Hawaii, she lodged a protest, and declared she would never recognize the annexation. This protest has never been withdrawn.

It is being whispered in theatrical circles that one of our most popular actresses is shortly to enter the bonds of matrimony, her future husband being a prominent author.

Several large bets have been made by Tory members that the government will be defeated on a snap division within the next fortnight.

At least half a dozen once important men are living at present in retirement owing to mental maladies, temporary or permanent. One is a peer of advanced years, who has come into the public eye rather prominently this year, but would not have for this reason.

Those who are offered autographs of famous people should be on their guard. A number of letters which are forgeries are being hawked round systematically. There exists at least one factory in London for the manufacture of these sham autographs, and they are so cleverly done that only the expert who has a deep knowledge of writing paper and inks can detect the imposture.

A big sensation has been caused at a fashionable German spa much patronized by the aristocracy of the old and new worlds by the announcement of one of its leading physicians that hereafter he will refuse to treat patients who insist on living a gay life, with the turkey trot, tango, baccarat and bridge as the main feature of their "cure."

A prominent man in the literary world is greatly concerned over the cigarette habit which has taken hold of his pretty young wife. She smokes from four to six packets a day, and all efforts to cure her have so far failed. She is, unknown to herself, being closely watched, as it is feared that in her present parlous condition she may do something desperate.

The date of the marriage of his royal highness, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and her highness, the Duchess of Fife, has now been officially announced, and will take place on Wednesday, October 15, next. His majesty has expressed a desire that the wedding ceremony should take place in the Chapel Royal, and it is anticipated that the wedding breakfast will take place in the state banqueting room at St. James palace. In all probability the Princess Mary will be one of the bridesmaids, and it is announced that the prince of Wales has consented to act as best man.

Their majesties honored with their presence the the performance of "Romeo et Juliet," at the Convent Garden opera house when there was a most brilliant assembly. Madame Melba's singing was superb, and Mr. John McCormack was heard for the first time in the role of Romeo, although he has performed this in America. Amongst a crowded audience many celebrated personages were noted. Prince Arthur of Connaught escorted the Duchess of Fife, who was accompanied by the princess royal and her sister, Princess Maud. The Dutchess of Fife was in a simple frock of white, and as ornaments had some pearls. Her majesty wore some superb diamonds with her delicate gown, and Princess Alexander of Teck was also in white with a feweled feather in her somewhat elaborate headdress. Lady Maud Warrender was seated close by Lady Randolph Churchill, and Lady Cowdray was with Lady Denman. Lady Alington was dressed entirely in black with black feathers in her hair, and near by the Marchioness of Dufferin in a box on the grand tier. Others to be noted were Mrs. Charles Van Raalte, Colonel and Mrs. John Leslie, Viscount Newry and Mourne, Mrs. Adair, the Hon. ofHenry and Mrs. Lawson, the Marchioness of Tullibaroline and Priscilla, Countess of Annesley.

There was a most interesting ceremonial atached to the reinauguration of the chapel of Henry VII. in Westminster Abbey, where the knightly Order of the Bath was installed once again. The history of the origin of the Order of Bath is lost in the mystery of ages, but it stands for all that the chivalry of knighthood can mean in the allegiance of the knight to his God, his sovereign, and his country. There is no recognized patron Saint for this order as there is for all the others, but it is likely there may be a movement in the direction of assuming a patron saint, and this would probably be Edward the Confessor, whose tomb lies near the chapel of the order. In honor of the day a gleaming pall of crimson silk damask had been laid across the tomb of the confessor, and on the monuments of England's kings there rested tokens of rosemary, lavender and laurel. There were deep crimson roses on the high altar and pure lilies shone through the gloom of the abbey upon the altar.

The king's movements during the immediate future include the annual visit to Goodwood, where he will be the guest of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon at Goodwood house, and where Lady Violet Brassey will act as hostess for her father. During this visit it is expected that his majesty will motor over to Arundel to call upon the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, and will also make some other friendly visits in the neighborhood. Cowes week will see the royal family afloat and at the termination of that it is expected that the king will proceed to Studley Royal as the guest of the Marquis of Ripon, where a stay of four days will be made.

It has been arranged that their majesties, the king and queen, will pay a private visit to Bambton Castle, county Durham, during November of of this year, when their host will be the Earl of Dunham The earl is the elder of twin brothers who were born in 1855, and the heir presumptive to the title is the Hon. Frederick Lambton, the younger twin. Earl Durham is the third holder if he title, and owns considerable property throughout the country from which he takes his cognomen. There is good shooting at Lambton, and it is anticipated that King George will enjoy some good sport on the few days he will spend in the north. As this is a strictly private and personal visit there will be no public functions whatever.

There is to be a special performonce at the Coliseum on October 11 next in aid of the French Hospital in London and of the Charing Cross hospital, which last is in great need of funds, and to this their majesties have graciously granted their patronage, and it is expected that both the king and queen will honor the entertainment with their presence. Sir William Carrington has conveyed to Mr Osward Stoll the confirmation of their interest. Madame Sarah Bernhardt is taking an active part in the arrangements.

It is generally reported that Queen Mary will make a stay of some duration on the Contient, and will be accompanied by the Princess Mary. Some time will be spent at the court of the Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenberg-Strelitz, (the hereditary grand duke has now returned home); and also, it is anticipated, a visit to the crown prince and princess at Dantzig. Whilst there it is probable that her majesty will inspect her regiment, the Prince Blucher Hazzars, who are now stationed at Stolp.

The strange disappearance from the social world of one of its best known figures at the very height of the season is the talk of the town. Several explanations have been given, but, strange to say, no one has yet given the right one. It is expected, however, that the truth will come out when a case which has been entered in the law courts comes on for hearing.

ITS BOARDING DEPARTMENT

In the formative period of the life of girls who are are away from home at school, proper home influences must be exerted in the school. To meet this need, Washington Seminary, Atlanta, maintains a strictly limited boarding department for girls from thirteen to twenty years of age.

It provides for them an elegant home, as beautiful in all its appointments as the most expensive private residences. The rooms are large, nicely furnished, and almost all have private baths connecting.

Students and teachers live together as a family, under a family method of government, and the faculty is thus able to exercise a careful oversight of all the girls' interests—health, amusements, studies, and moral training.

PHILLIES FALL DOWN; CLEVELAND LOSES OUT

Giants and Mackmen Got Busy During Week Just Closed and Ended the Hot Figth for Flag—Rivals in 1912 Series Now Sure to Again Clash

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Whatever chance remained for a shift in the prospect that the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans would once more face each other as world's series contenders faded almost to the vanishing point in the gloaming of Saturday eve.

Twelve full games now separate New York and Philadelphia in the National league with the Quakers wobbling and the Giants again in the full stride of their fast 1913 gait. In the American league the Athletics, although shot to pieces with injuries, have increased their lead. Just when they should have shown quality and aggressiveness, the Clevelands failed, and with a string of defeats broken but once during last week found themselves trailing the leaders by nine games as the new playing week opened.

With the close of the regular season and the call of play in the world's series scarcely more than six weeks away, it takes little figuring to show how small likelihood there is of an overturn in either league. From present appearances Manager McGraw soon can begin to groom Mathewson, Marquard, Tesreau and Demaree for the post-season fray, while Connie Mack soon will have to tackle the problem of picking the youngster to co-operate with Bender and Plank in efforts to puzzle the Giant batsmen, unless Jack Coombs shall have recuperated sufficiently by October to go on the firing line.

The break in Philadelphia's spurt which virtually put Dooin's men out of the running in the National league race began with the appearance of Chicago on the Quaker field. Four straights was the Cubs' record in that series up to mid-week, when the Phillies rallied against Evers' team and won their single victory of the last eight games.

Pittsburg, fresh from a triumph over New York in three out of five games at the Polo grounds, resumed Philadelphia's humiliation, cleaning up a three-game series that ended yesterday. Philadelphia's best was to tie the Pirates Friday.

Meanwhile Chicago, moving on to New York, fell victims to the renewed vim of the Giants and dropped the entire series, enabling the McGrawites to strengthen their lead almost to the point of impregnability. Their reverses at Pittsburg were largely chargeable to the game put up both at bat and in the field by Honus Wagner.

TWIRLERS ARE OFF.

Pittsburg with its twirling staff in shape again is displaying as good a brand of ball as any team in the league and will be a contestant for second place if the Phillies' slump keeps up. Chicago also has been doing good work.

The second division teams also had a tight time of it among themselves. Cincinnati, gaining ground rapidly; St. Louis falling off perceptibly and Brooklyn and Boston about holding their own. The Cardinals seem anchored at the foot of the ladder and rumors of radical Changes regarding players, management and ownership of the team are flying. Mrs. Britton is reported wearying of running a big league club, particularly one going no better than Huggins' aggregation, and to be willing to sell if she can get her price. Should a change in ownership not develop, reports have it that Ed Konetchy is to succeed Huggins as directing head of the team.

The poor showing of the Clevelanders and the game struggle of the Athletics to hold their lead with eleven men on the hospital list were the striking features in the American league. The Philadelphia catching problem became so serious, with Lapp, Thomas and Schang laid up that the veteran first baseman, Harris Davis, had to go behind the bat for a time on Saturday. Oldring has tried his hand at shortstop with considerable success, but Mack now has Lavan to fill in until Barry recovers. Houck, Brown and Shawkey, the team's young pitchers, have stood up nobly and between them are accountable for the Athletics' four victories, while two of the games lost were dropped by Bender and Plank.

Part of Cleveland's relapse has been due to failure of the pitchers to keep to their previous standard and lack of pinch hitting among batsmen. Even Jackson, while still hitting well, did not bat up to his usual high mark in the Boston series, which the Red Sox captured in straight games.

Washington is pressing the Naps for second position, only twenty points separating the teams as the new week opened. Green is pitching good ball again and Boehling, after losing four in a row, when his winning streak of eleven was broken, came through with a victory. Walter Johnson's record, including today's victory, is fourteen straight, with the season's figures standing twenty-nine victories against five defeats.

Walker Goes Up

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 25.—Clarence "Tilile" Walker, an outfielder for the Kansas City (American association) club, was traded last night to the St. Louis (American league) team for Mack Allison, a pitcher; "Pete" Compton, an outfileder, and "Bunny" Brief, utility man. Walker will join the St. Louis club tomorrow.

M'LOUGHLIN IS FAVORED

Champion Is Three-to-One Shot Against the Field in the Finals

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 25.—The chance of a successful defense of his title by Maurice E. McLaughlin, of San Francisco, against the three other survivors of last week's all-comers' tournament for the national lawn tennis championship, was a matter of much discussion and not a few wagers among Casino visitors. The odds on McLoughlin were 3 to 1 against the field, consisting of Nathaniel W. Niles, of Boston, and R. Norris Williams II, and Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia.

In the semi-finals Niles will play Williams and Johnson will meet McLoughlin. It seemed the general opinion that the finals Tuesday would be between Williams and McLoughlin.

That the national contests this year have set a higher standard in lawn tennis was admitted by all the experts today. In addition it was pointed out that the future of the game had been materially strengthened by the appearance of a wealth of young players of more than ordinary ability. Close followers of the sport declared that the game had increased 20 per cent in proficiency and 100 per cent in interest within the last ten years.

Reaching the penultimate round in a national tournament is a new sensation for both Niles and Williams. Johnson reached the finals last year and came within two games of the championship through McLoughlin's inability to fathom the low spinning returns to his back hand.

Three of the semi-finalists—McLoughlin, Johnson and Williams—were members of the Davis cup team, and it is interesting to note also that they are rated at 1, 2 and 3 or at the top of the heap of association players.

McLoughlin defeated Williams last year in the sixth round 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, while his scores over Johnson in the finals were 4-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Wood Won't Play

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Warren K. Wood, champion of the Western Golf association, and runner up in the National two years ago, will not play in the National at Garden City this year. The absence of Wood is thought to weaken considerably the westerner's chances of annexing the National title. Charles Evans, Jr., will head the Chicago play*ers who will go east this week.*

TODAY'S BILL OF FARE

Players Who Prove Slow GOLF Ridiculous To Others

Every golf course is more or less infested with players who, by reason of their habit of excessive deliberation over the consideration of shots and the playing of shots, ruthlessly waste the time of every other player on the links. The difference between the pair that goes round in one hour and three-quarters and the pair that makes the circuit in three hours and a half represents a wide margin of waste.

It is fair to assume that some men think and act quicker than others in everything they undertake, but when the undue spending of time brings so much delay and discomfort for clubmates, the appointment of rangers to stimulate the dead ones seems highly desirable.

The man who indulges in long drawn out "gardening" on the line of every putt, brushing away, as we cannot but suspect illegally, a series of objects largely a matter of imagination as having any effect on the true roll of a ball, and the man who takes numerous practice swings before making every stroke are the chief offenders.

This is the kind of slowness of which we must all at some time have been conscious and against which we ought to guard.

Few golfers will even be able to attain the speed of a Duncan, who hits the ball apparently instantly he has taken his stance, and few would be able to get any satisfactory results by attempting to imitate him. Massey, the famous French professional, who will visit us for our open championship, is very quick through the green but rather studious and deliberate at putting.

Alex Smith takes little time over his strokes through the green, and taps the ball into the cup or up to the hole side the minute he has taken his stance for putting. Travis and Trav*ers are models of excellence for the* average amateur to follow. Both of them are excellent putters and take just enough time to calculate the force to be imparted to the ball and the line to the cup.

In every club certain slow players seem to enjoy making up four ball matches. As a rule these combinations start out early and so retard the speed of every player who follows. Your slow players, as a rule, always indulge in side bets and insist on holing out every put.

Another strange characteristic of most slow players is that they, as a rule, seriously object to allowing anybody who follows to go through. No, the slow player, as a rule, is a stickler for holding his place on the round and generally is in a hurry, so to speak. He realizes that it takes him a lot of time to go around, and he is ever anxious to get at something else which he will worry through in the same laborious fashion.

STRAIGHT DRIVE.

British Don't Help Athletics

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The great Olympic fund of $500,000 is not rolling up as fast as the promoters expected. An appeal for this amount to provide adequately for the British team at the Olympic games in Berlin in 1916 was issued August 17. It was signed by Earl Grey, Lord Roberts, the Duke of Westminster and many other prominent men, but only $25,000 has been subscribed in the first week.

The project has most strong opposition, notwithstanding Lord Roberts' name, which headed the appeal, usually is the most potent influence any patriotic cause can have. Most of the *criticisms are that wholesale subsidiz*ing of athletics would foster professionalism and be contrary to the wholesome traditions of British sport. Some of the sharpest thrusts have reference to attempted "Americanization" of sport.

The Saturday Review predicts that the money will be raised, although, the paper adds, if it were asked for anything important to the nation it would not be forthcoming.

"If Stone Hengs (a celebrated monument in Salisbury plain) were offered to the public to save its being sought by a Yankee for $500,000 would the British public rise?" asks the paper.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

The Crackers were benefited all around by the outcome of Sunday's battles. While the Pels were downing the Billies, Memphis was defeating Mobile. This pushed Montgomery farther away and pulled Mobile a little nearer. The Crackers are now only six games behind Mobile.

Ther was no change in the American league. Pihladelphia, Cleeviand and Washington all won their games.

No games were scheduled in the National.

Baseball Not Family Game

Few families cna furnish more than one member who is good enough to hold a job in fast company. The Delehanty family, with five boys in the majors for several years, was an exception. Ty Cobb has a brother who appears to be getting jobs more be*cause he is a brother of Ty's than be*cause of any ability on his part.

Josh Devore has a brother in the minors. The Athletics played against him at Galveston in 1912. He is a ringer for Josh, but his chances of ever being a big league star are very slim. Manager McGraw gave a brother of Johnny Eves a trial last spring, and then sent him adrift.

The fact that a member of the team has made good in a major league is a recommendation for others when they are touted to managers. The Cincinnati Reds are going to give a trial to Harry Camnitz, a brother of Howard Camnitz, of the Pirates.

Harry Williams, who has just broken into the American league as a member of the New York Americans, is a brother of Gus Williams, the right fielder of the St. Louis Browns, who looks in a uniform like Pat Donovan.

Several major league stars have younger brothers in the minors, but the Delehanty's, with five members, and the O'Neill family, of Minooka, Pa., with Steve, now of Cleveland, following in the footsteps of his brothers, Jack and Mike, are the leaders in having furnished the majors with the most members.

Dobbs Hunts Star

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 25.—Following a conference with Manager Dobbs, of the Montgomery (Southern league) club, Roy Lasater, who has this year been pitching for the Crown Cotton Mill team of this city, will report to the Billikins at Chattanooga today.

Lasater is just 17 years of age, and, although practically inexperienced, is ambitious and eager to lear. He is about six feet tall and well built. He has pitched a number of excellent games for the loca lteam this year.

Savannah Is Setting Pace

SAVANNAH, continues to maintain a position in the South Atlantic league standing calculated to bring satisfaction to that city's baseball enthusiasts and determination on the part of other clubs of the league which still entertain serious hopes of winning the pennant. The record for the past week shows a series of triumphs for Savannah—five games won and two lost. A prominent part of the misfortunes of Columbus this week was the double defeat administered by Savannah Wednes*day.* The record of Columbus for the week was two won and five lost.

Albany made a spurt this week, winning four out of six games, and closing the week with a record of having risen in that time from sixth to fourth place. Charleston's record shows a drop from fourth to a tie with Macon for "cellar" position. Charleston won a single game out of five games played during the week. Macon lost four out of six. Jacksonville's percentage for the week is on the safe side, the Florida city club having won three and lost two.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 25.—Montgomery began its last series of games on the Chattanooga field this afternoon. Weather fair. Batteries—Chattanooga, Kroh and Street; Montgomery, E. Brown and Gribbens. Roy LaCater, semi-professional pitcher, of Dalton, Ga., joined the Montgomery club here today.

(By Associated Press.)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 25.—New Orleans opened a four-game series with Nashville here today. The weather is crisp and fair. Walker and Adams are slated for the battery work for New Orleans. For Nashville, Williams will pitch and Noyes catch.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Ty Cobb slumped five points in his battinfi average by failure to connect out of four times up in Sunday's game. By his heavy stick work in last week's games Cobb gained a six-point lead, which has now dwindled to a one-point margin.

Jackson connected safetly two times out of his foru times up.

Eight Women Finish Swim Down River

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—Eight out of sixteen women who entered a two-mile swimming contest for women only in the Mississippi river, finished in fine condition here. They were aided by a strong current.

Miss Rernice Wirfs, of Webster Groves, a suburb, won the race by covering the distance in 30 minutes, 43 seconds. She finished 14 seconds ahead of Miss Hilda Stoessel.

Cubs Wouldn't Play Against Colored Hurler

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The Chicago National league team, in an exhibition game here, defeated the Rutland Tri-State league club 5 to 0. At no time did Rutland have a chance of making a run. Rutland wanted to pitch Wickware, the negro twirler of the Mohawk Giants, but the Chicago players refused to play against him.

Batteries: Stack, Moore and Bresnahan; Sherman and Atkins. Umpires, Glenn and Machan.

London Doesn't Wish Johnson to Show

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Jack Johnson's music hall engagements in London were "postponed" today on account of the intense resentment displayed on all sides.

It is understood that the "postponement" will be made permanent later, as the licensing authorities have threatened to make trouble if the engagement of the negro pugilist is not cancelled.

Crackers Play Bunch of Games Here This Week, and With Barons Doing a Bit of Work on the Gulls, Chances Look to Be Very Bright

With the Cracker club fighting desperately to gain a firm hold upon second place and get just as near the Mobile Gulls as possible, the Memphis team invades Ponce de Leon park on Monday for a series of four games. And upon the result of these games largely depends the position that the Crackers will hold when the race is over.

Manager Smith fortunately has most of his pitchers going in grand order just at the present writing and it will take some mighty good ball playing to lose many ball games. Joe Conzelman, Gil Price, Elliott Dent, Carl Thompson and Slim Love are all pitching real ball, and you have certainly got to hit the ball to get away with the game when they are on the slab.

In the Monday game, which starts the series with Memphis, Joe oCnzelman will be worked against Harrell. With Joe in shape it should mean a victory for the Crfackers and with the Barons doing their duty against the Mobile outfit it is possible that the Crackers will do a bit of climbing.

The last two days of the week the New Orleans club will be in our midst for two doubel-headers followed by a two-game affair on Monday. This means six games agains tthe tail-end Pelicans and with four against Memphis the Crfackers should get going and be much nearer Mobile than six games when the two series end.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Joe Jackson hit .500 against Russ Ford Sunday when the Naps blanked New York. Ed Sweney, another ex-Cracker, was Ford's battery mate, but couldn't help his team much against Falkenberg's pitching.

Rube Oldring had a good day at St. Louis Sunday helping the Mackmen pile up a nine run score. Rube was up five times, hit safe twice and tallied as many times. He also gathered in three chances in the outfield.

Derrill Pratt hit safe once out of four attempts. His work in the infield was better. He accepted four chances and got two putouts without an error. Balenti, romping on the other side of the sack from Pratt, had the same chances, but booted one of them. He managed to score, although he failed to hit.

Tris Speaker took a liking to Dause's benders and sent three of them into safe territory. One went for three bases. Tris was at bat five times. In the outfield he had two putouts to his credit.

Steve Yerkes, at second, accepted three chances and made two putouts without an error. He also figured in a fast double play. At the bat he hit safe once and scored one of the three runs for Boston.

Powers Works on New League

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—A new league, which shall have the sanction of organized baseball and which shall be the weapon with which organized ball shall attack the Federal league, is planned by John Powers, deposed president of the Federal organization. He left here last night for a trip through ten cities.

Powers claims the support of certain elements in the National and American leagues and in spite of the collapse of his plans this year, he expects to be the head of a third major league.

He has been in St. Louis, where he claims support; has canvassed Chicago and now goes to Indianapolis, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Baltimore, New York, Montreal, Toronto and Buffalo to confer with those interested in a third league scheme.

It is reported that the Federal league has cut into the receipts of American association teams at Kansas City and Indianapolis and that Powers may receive aid from some association clubs.

Thomasville Fans Loyal To Club Throughout Year

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Aug. 25.—With the first place in the second series of games of the Empire league practically assured to Thomasville, Manager Dudley, of the Thomasville team, is receiving many compliments as to his success as a leader. That Thomasville has kept the same manager and practically the same team throughout the whole season speaks well for the management, as no team has had to struggle under so many accidents to players and other disadvantages and the only man whose place on the team has had to be filled was disqualified by injuries. Manager Dudley has proved himself a hard worker and one who has kept his team at all times eager to win their games. He is a fine player himself and always "in the game."

Intense interest is taken in all this section in the post-season games to be played between Valdosta and Thomasville for the league pennant and in both cities there will doubtless be large crowds to witness them.

"I have played ball from Maine to Florida and from California to Georgia," said "Johnnie" Wagnon, Thomasville's famous left fielder, "but this is the best ball town in proportion to its population that I have ever struck"—and this is the general verdict on all sides. Not only do the citizens of the very best class, male and female, attend the games, but they have stood by the team and have given the same support when they have a "slump," as when they were striking the top, and the result has been that the boys have played for all there was in them to show their appreciation of it.

That Thomasville will be ready to "play ball" when the season of 1914 opens is very certain and if all the other towns in the league have the same feeling as that manifested here, the Empire will have come to stay.

E. BROWN ONCE PASSED UP BY THE BROOKLYN OUTFIT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 25.—If handsome Charley Ebbetts, the genial owner of the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers, had listened to the advice of a certain Southern league pilot early this spring, the coffers of the Superbas would have been $6,000 richer just at the present moment. Instead of spending $60,000 for players this fall Ebbetts would have spent but $54,00. In short, if the Brooklyn magnate had purchased Elmer Brown this spring, as Bill Schwartz implored him to do when the St. Louis Browns were looking for a purchaser, he could have secured him for $1,500 instead of $7,500, the price which he eventually was forced to hand over for Johnny Dobbs' star hurler, although it has never been geographically decided just where the sum in question is now located, whether partly in the jeans of Elmer himself and Richard Tillis, or in the strong box of Colonel Robert Hedges.

Along in the early spring of this selfsame season when Bill Schwartz had pennant aspirations, that was before he lost Harry Welchonce by the way, the Nashville pilot felt that he needed a dependable right-hander. After scanning over the list of surplus material he decided that Elmer Brown, who it might be stated had won a pennant for Bill Schwartz in 1909 at Akron, was just the man to round out his staff. After Brown Schwartz went.

Charley Ebbetts was the man that agreed to swing the deal for Nashville Bill and everything was arranged. Ebbetts got a price of $1,500 and here came a hitch. The Vols didn't see their way clear to pay more than $1,000 so Ebbetts passed Brown up, not willing to invest $500 in the heaver for the season.

Six months passed and Ebbetts then proceeded to purchase for $7,500 the heaver that he couldn't see for more than $1,000 in the spring. And now Stovall, of the Browns, is giving Hedges what Sherman said about war for not recalling Elmer, so the hurler must be worth the price paid, in the opinion of Stovall at least.

Giants and Mackmen Appear to Have Flags Tucked Away

IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE SODA IS CHARGED, ASK HANK. ---BY FARREN

THE SUMMER VARIETY, ESPECIALLY.

Some think of Heaven as a dream
Above all things that life hold dear;
Of song and love and stars agleam,
Of spring eternal through the year;
A joker's lip—beyond all space
Of dreams that be, of tales untold—
I picture Heaven as a place
WHERE NO ONE EVER HAS A COLD.

Some think of Heaven, from knocks,
As golden paved, without a flat;
Where only Johnsons crown the box
And only Cobbs and Bakers bat;
For me, blear-eyed in deep despair,
Beyond its glitter and its gold,
It's quite enough to know up there
THAT NO ONE EVER HAS A COLD.

The next Giant-Philly series is likely to be crucial in the extreme, a nerve-wrecking melee. If the Giants drop the entire series they will only be 7 or 8 games ahead. Or perhaps 9.

Mr. Herrmann states that he doesn't care to discuss the affairs of the club in the newspapers.

If we owned the Reds we'd never attempt to discuss their affairs in the newspapers, either, as long as the United States mail regulations were as severe on profanity and invective.

There's only one sane method of discursing the Reds and that merely involves the absence of three letters as said discussing begins.

THE PITH OF IT.

Johnson, according to Griff, has been working with a sore arm of late. Griff should take him out and break his shoulder blade or cave in his elbow. Then he might win a game or two.

"The only pitcher my club can't beat," remarked Connie Mack five or six years ago, "is one with a sore arm."

Also the pitcher who hasn't anything but a glove and a prayer—according to the athlete who has just whiffed for the third time.

It all depends upon where you start from. Two years ago Chance considered anything short of the world series a highly successful year. Sixth place today would be a miracle and seventh place a "banner campaign."

POT HUNTING THE LEADER.

Leadership is a big factor in a ball club. But it isn't the entire programme. We know of about five managers this waning campaign who would be jostled into the shrubbery if there were any others in sight to take their places. But there are not.

This is true of minor leagues as well as minors. There are not three managers in the minors who know how to train and develop young talent so that it can move along when it reaches the big show.

For a game that has attained such proportions it is next to astounding when one considers the amount of inefficiency shown. Less than 10 per cent of ball players and managers alike give the game the best they have or the study that it needs.

ONE EXAMPLE.

Here's one example. The art of sliding is one of the big features of base running and one of the most important as a bar against injury. Yet in the big league run of sixteen camps there are less than four clubs that have sliding pits and that spend any great amount of time developing this phase of the pastime. And then these managers raise a roar against the luck of the game when they have several injured sliding to second—injured because they have never been taught how to slide.

"The general inefficiency of the world," wrote Arnold Bennet recently, "makes me weep." He must have been thinking of baseball, for despite all the wonderful advances it has made in certain directions, it is still an untilled field save in a few scattering cases where brains have been planted with knowledge and energy.

There is no great profession extant which has seen or known such meagre development in comparison to what might be harvested if there were a few more with the ambition of Cobb Evers, etc.

NOTHING BUT ATHLETICS NEXT SEASON, SAYS MACK

Connie Tells Cleveland Supporters That Naps Had Better Win This Year If They Want a Flag

"If Cleveand is going to win a pennant, it better do it this year, for it is my honest opinion that it will have no chance next year, for I figure that I will then have the best team I ever had."

Such is the remark made by Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics. Connie has little to say about the race this year. He is not given to boasting and has not put in a claim for the championship of 1913, but he is taking time by the forelock and putting in his bid for the 1914 bunting.

Connie likes the material he has at hand. He is nursing it carefully and by virtue of that caution may succeed in winning the title this year. But win or lose this year, he cannot see anything but success ahead next season.

His reasons are many. While Ira Thomas has slowed up and Jack Lapp is not hitting as well as he should and has, Walter Schang already looks as good as any catcher in the league and he should improve next year over the great form displayed this season. Connie probably will pick off a youngster this fall to help the former Buffalonian and Lapp.

Take his pitchers. Bender and Plank have done grand work this year. They may not be as good next season, but that is what the experts have been saying for years. Jack Coomes must be reckoned as an uncertainty, but looks in better physical condition than he has for several campaigns.

But Connie is not counting on his three veterans. He has already quietly announced his plans, which are to use Bush, Shawkey, Brown and Houck regularly in the box in 1914 and give his three veterans a fair amount of rest and only call upon them for relief work and in emergencies.

He asserts, most emphatically, that Bush, Shawkey, Houck and Brown form the best quartet of youngsters in the country, and he counts on them being better in 1914 than this year, when they have shown ability to go along and keep the Athletics in the race.

Then there is no telling just what prizes Mack will pick up in the draft and by purchase. He got Schang, Bush and Shawkey this season, and the plums may again fall into his basket.

Of course, Connie has no infield worth mentioning—has no one except McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker, only three of whom can hit .330 or better and only four of whom can field with consistent brilliancy. Pretty tough outfit—that $100,000 infield.

They say the weak spot in the Athletics is the outfield. So it is compared with the remainder of the team, but lined up against the outer garden representatives of other clubs, it shows superiority over St. Louis, Washington, Chicago and New York.

Campbell Winner

VANCOUVER, Aug. 25.—Ray Campbell, of Seattle, won the decision over Eddie Moy, of Allentown, Pa., at the end of the scheduled ten-round bout at Brig House arena this afternoon. The fight was an elimination contest for the honor of fighting Champion Willie Ritchie on Labor day at the same arena. Moy could not do much with his heaviernd stronger opponent.

Star Golfers At Practice

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Amateur golfers began to gather today for a week of whetting up their strokes over the links in the Garden City Golf club, of Long Island, where the national amateur tournament commences next Monday. Entries for the championship close tonight. It is known, however, that the field will be one of the finest the amateur national has known, including crack players of the east and west, as well as a few from abroad. There will be Jerome Travis, holder of the title; his ancient foe, J. W. Travis, the brilliant young Chicago player, and Norman Hunter, a Scottish internationalist. The absence of Warren Wood, the western champion, who was runner-up in the national tournament two years ago, will somewhat weaken the western contingent, but with Evans, Paul Hunter and Macon Phelps, Chicago will have some promising contenders.

Travis' friends assert that their favorite is playing better golf this year than ever before, and that if he strikes his best form there is little chance of his title being wrested from him.

Frederick Herreshoff, twice a finalist in the national tournament; W. C. Fawnes, Jr., and others also figure prominently among the prospective entrants.

Marshallville Good

MARSHALLVILLE, Ga., Aug. 25.—Marshallville defeated Plains two games and tied third. In the first game Marshallville defeated Ulains, 15 to 2, knocking Carpenter, Plains' star pitcher, out of the box.

In the second game Marshallville used a new pitcher and catcher and again defeated Plains, 4 to 3. In the third game Marshallville used same pitcher who had pitched the day before and tied. The score was 6 and 6.

Grant Park Wins!

The Grant Park team of the Baraca league won its game from McDonald by forfeiture. McDonald failed to put in appearance.

Lake Returned To the Minors

DETROIT, Aug. 25.—Another major league veteran of many years has been sent to the minors. President Navin, of the Detroit (American league Baseball club, announced that Pitcher Joe Lake had been released to Minneapolis, and that Catcher Rondeau, a recruit, would accompany him there. The two players go to Minneapolis in part payment for Pitcher Comstock, purchased last week. Lake's last major league appearance occurred Saturday, when New York knocked him from the mound in two innings. Late Sunday night President Navin announced that the Detroit cub, at the request of Manager Jennings, would retain Lake for a few days before turning him over to Minneapolis. Mr. Navin stated that Jennings felt that the Detroit pitching staoff was weak at present, and Lake might be needed until one or two of the pitchers who have been indisposed rounded into shape.

McDermott Wins

SHAWNEE-ON-DEL., WARE, Pa., Aug 25.—After breaking the record of the course with a fine seventy, John McDermott, of Atlantic City, national open golf champion, won the Shawnee Country club's open golf tournament today with a total score of 293. "Alec" Smith, of Wykagyl, was second with a score of 301.

Buford Wins 13-Inning Contest

Buford deafted Lawrenceville in one of the prettiest games of ball ever played in Buford, in a 12-inning game. Robinson of the locals striking out 16 of his opponents add allowing only 3 hits. Feature of the game was home run of Brogdon tieing the score in the eighth and Brogdon's three-base hit in the twelfth scoring Marton. McConnell pitched a real good game.

Bob Armstrong has been engaged to Charley Miller, the promising San Francisco pugilist to get in shape for his coming contest with Arthur Pelkey.

The Ski club of Great Britain announces that it has decided to institute a championship, open to all British ski runners. The competition will be held during the coming winter.

When Jack Donaldson beat Harry Hutchins' record of 30 seconds for 300 yards at Weaste, Manchester, England, recently, covering the distance in 29 3-4 seconds, he ran on a grass track, which is one of the fastest in England.

Cross-Dundee Bout Is to Be Delayed

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—The Leach Cross-Johnny Dundee bout scheduled for September 1 at the Vernon arena, was postponed indefinitely last night in deference to the death of John (Bull) Young. The action was taken at the suggestion of Cross himself on the ground that it would be best to "wait a while."

Further investigation of the cause of Youngs death as a result of injuries received in the Vernon arena with Jess Willard probably will await the verdict of the coroner's jury. Agitation continues for legal action to prevent prize fights at Vernon as well as elsewhere in the state.

DRY WEATHER SOUTHWEST CAUSED RISE IN COTTON

Market in New York Closed 22 to 31 Points Higher Than Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Reports of dry weather southwest, a bullish private crop report and indications of alarm abroad caused active buying at the opening of the cotton market. First prices were firm at 11 to 17 points up, and active months sold 21 to 22 points net higher during the first few minutes. This carried October contracts to 11.91c, and while realizing developed around this level, offerings were well absorbed.

Memphis advices placed the condition of the crop at 69.6 per cent, a deterioration of 10 per cent from the government figures of last month, and there were private reports indicating a very low condition in Texas and Oklahoma.

Realizing was heavy enough to cause reactions of 5 or 6 points from the best during the middle of the morning, and trading became a little less active, but bullish private crop reports continue to come in from both the southwest and Alabama, and the market at midday was firm, with prices 16 to 19 points net higher.

Estimated receipts today, 15,000 bales.

The market became somewhat less active during the early afternoon, but heavy realizing sales were steadily absorbed and prices continued steady on fresh buying or further covering of shorts. Active months ruled about 18 to 20 points net higher.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 25.—Cotton futures opened very steady at an advance of 18 to 21 points on good cables and a dry weather map. Accounts from the west over Sunday were not encouraging and led to the belief that deterioration of the crop had continued. Private bureaus came out with condition figures, showing a loss for the month of about 10 points. This showing resulted in much buyingg for both accounts. Longs were heavy sellers to realize profits, but their offerings were well received, and at the end of the first half hour of business prices were 20 to 24 points over Saturday's close.

The market received several setbacks during the morning because of realizing operations on the long side, but the tone held steady and the market displayed good recuperative power, late in the morning standing well up toward the 12c level on the new crop months. Reports from the west were discouraging, and led to small estimates of the crops of Texas and Oklahoma. Bulls pointed out that, with all the open cotton in the fields, receipts were not large. At the highest of the morning the leading months were 25 to 27 points over Saturday's close. At noon they were 22 to 23 points over.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 2.—There were only a few light scattered showers in Texas over Sunday, but cool weather prevailed over nearly the entire belt, with no excess in temperatures anywhere. Indications are for increasing cloudiness and some showers in the western states and Gulf districts, part cloudy to fair elsewhere with normal temperatures. Conditions are making for further and more general precipitation in the west this week. Liverpool showed as much as ten points advance on futures at the opening of our market, against 11 higher due. Spots 12 higher, sales 5,000. First trades here were at advance of about 16 points; selling restricted by intimidating crop reports; expectation of a bullish weekly report tomorrow. Low private condition forecasts due this week, and the opinion that the coming bureau will show a decline up to 10 points in the average condition of the belt. The demand for contracts was steady enough to hold the advance. Detailed government records show scattered showers over Sunday in Texas with nearly half an inch at Alice, Brenham, Houston, Riverside and Pierce, the largest amounts given, but showing showery conditions over the state.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The strong cables this morning from Liverpool brought out a general wave of short covering and buying by belated bulls, profit taking by longs was apparently the principal selling. There is considerable talk today of a reaction being in order, and some of the bull forces I understand are advising friends to take profits. The market has taken the selling well, and among the best buyers were apparently the spot interests. It is very natural to expect considerable liquidation after a hundred points advance in so short a time, but this would naturally leave the market in a more healthy condition. The weather from now on will not be considered so seriously as it has been, but the amount of damage already sustained is the question to be reckoned with.—Anderson.

COTTON GOSSIP

Washington long range forecast Moderate temperature during the coming week, except in the far west, and irregular rains were forecasted today by Chief Marvin, of the weather bureau. "The distribution of atmospheric pressure over the northern hemisphere is such as to indicate a continuance of moderate temperatures for the season the coming week in all parts of the country except the far southwest, where readings will be above normal. The rainfall during the week will be generally local and irregularly distributed. A disturbance of moderate intensity will appear in the far west about Wednesday. It will move eastward, attended by local showers and thunder storms, and cross the middle west Thursday or Friday, and the eastern states near the end of the week. There are no indications at present of a disturbance in the West Indies."

Memphis Commercial-Appeal: 69.6, 10 points lower than July.

The map shows partly cloudy in the western states, cloudy in the Atlantics, fair elsewhere; no excessive temperatures; on the contrary, cool weather continues in the northern two-thirds of the belt. Light, scattered showers in the Atlantics, and a few light showers reported by private sources in Texas. Indications are for increasing cloudiness west, possibly some scattered showers south Texas; generally fair normal temperature rest of belt.—Kofler.

Dallas wires: "Texas partly cloudy to clear; showers in Mount Vernon Pittsburg and Mount Pleasant. Oklahoma clear."

Forecast—Louisiana: Tonight and Tuesday generally fair, except showers on the coast tonight or Tuesday; light northeast winds on the coast.

Arkansas: Tonight and Tuesday generally fair; warmer tonight in north portion.

Oklahoma and West Texas: Tonight and Tuesday generally fair.

Kentucky: Generally fair tonight and Tuesday.

Miller & Co. say: Whether or not the damage reports have been exaggerated, it seems useless to butt against a stone wall, for temporarily sentiment is with the market.

Some scattered profit-taking. Baruch said to be seller through Schill & Shearson. Market takes it well. Spot people good buyers on all soft spots.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: We notice that daily sales to exporters continue of liberal volume. We don't care for the short side.

Corn—There may possibly be some further scattered liquidation to come to the opinion that weakly held corn had been sold and are quite sure that there is a large short interest, especially for local account.

Oats—Prices depend largely on the action in corn, but we think much the same conditions regarding holdings and shorts exists in this market as in corn.

STOCK GOSSIP

N. L. Carpenter & Co. say: While the Mexican affair is the dominating factor in the situation it looks as if it would be settled peaceably before long. Stocks are in strong position. They would not go down on the unfavorable news of last week and any encouraging developments should bring activity and higher prices.—Potter.

JOURNAL OF COMMERCE REPORT

Weevil in Louisiana and Mississippi are doing considerable damage. Some shedding. Cultivation good. Too much rain in some sections, too little in others. Alabama crop very spotted; condition slightly lower than last month's 79.2, but above last year's 74 per cent. Mississippi condition will be considerably better than last year, when it was 71.3, but somewhat lower than last month's 60. Louisiana condition will be several points below last month, when it was 78.7.

Alabama: On account of late June planting, cotton is very spotted, and fear is entertained that June cotton will suffer considerable deterioration. Some sections have sufficient rainfall and their prospects are bright for a full crop. But the major part of the state is needing rain badly. Cotton is shedding and opening prematurely, and picking has begun in some sections. Cultivation has been excellent and, with the exception of boll weevil, the crop is free from insect damage. As a result of heat and drouth, condition is slightly lower than a month ago, when it was 79.2, but better than last year, when it was 74.

Mississippi: Barring gthe very general prevalence of the boll weevil, the condition is very good. Farmers are fighting the pest vigorously, with good results. The plant is of good size, well cultivated and fruitage good. Many sections are beginning to feel the need of rain, and shedding is becoming general, owing to hot, dry winds. Bolls are opening freely and picking will be general in September. Percentage condition is considerably better than a year ago at this time when it was 71.3, but somewhat lower than last month, when it was 80.

Louisiana: The presence of the boll weevil is practically universal, and they have been the cause of material deterioration. Excessive rains in many sections have favored their depredations. Shedding is also general, but not more than normal for this time of the year. Cultivation remains good, and there is little complaint of scarcity of labor. Drouth and high temperature have affected some localities, and picking will be fairly general by September 1. Partial returns on percentage condition indicates several points below last month, when it was 78.7.

COMMERCIAL APPEAL'S CROP REPORT

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 25.—Commercial-Appeal says: The condition of the cotton crop is estimated to be 69.6 of normal, an even 10 points loss from the government's figures of July 25. The figures given here are based on an average date of August 22. Deterioration has been heaviest west of the river, where the long drouth continues unbroken and is making itself felt on the crop. The conditions probably have never been worse in Oklahoma and in Texas. The losses have been very severe, the plant is withering and is shedding heavily, and young bolls are opening prematurely. In Alabama the grade of cotton brought to market is said to be rather poor. Hot, dry weather prevailed over most of the eastern belt during the last fortnight, with a resultant deterioration in Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama. The loss in Mississippi and Louisiana was greatly augmented by boll weevil, the second hatching of which is infecting the fields and doing much damage. In Georgia and Alabama the plant about held its own during the month and prospects still are bright in these states for a splendid crop.

In many places in the west it is contended that rains will not be of benefit should they fall soon, but in most sections correspondents are of the opinion that good rains would greatly add to the yield. The extremely hot weather and the very dry soil tended to minimize the benefit accruing from the recent scattered showers in Texas. Owing to the dry hot weather cotton is opening fast and picking promises soon to become general. Farmers are placing the lint on the market as soon as ginned. Labor, generally speaking, is ample. Tennessee 62 against 90 on July 25; Mississippi 70 against 77; Arkansas 75 against 87; Alabama 70 against 79, Georgia 74 against 76; South Carolina 75 against 75; North Carolina 77 against 77; Texas 67 against 81; Oklahoma 56 against 81; Louisiana 68 against 79; United States 69.6 against 79.6.

Saving and Investing

Anthony N. Brady.

BY JOHN M. OSKISON

Brady, Whitney, Widener and Elkins—here were four famous names of that period of our public service corporation history when it was discovered that great fortunes were to be made by buying scattered and independent properties, consolidating them under one management and one name, and then inducing the public to buy the huge blocks of securities created after the combination.

Half a dozen street railway systems—New York's and Philadelphia's among them—were put together by this group of enterprising men, later to fall apart with tremendous losses. But the losses fell upon the many holders of the bonds and stocks, not upon the enterprising men who had put them out.

Brady, however, stayed with the game through the period of bankruptcy, and in the last ten years he had worked hard to put some of the old exploited street railway companies and some of the gas and electric lighting companies on their feet as real money earners. The present Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, with fine equipment and a steadily rising curve of earnings, stands as a striking instance of the power of Brady in constructive work.

Brady was all business. He never went to school after he was thirteen; at nineteen he was proprietor of a tea store in Albany, N. Y., and before he quit tea he controlled the trade in Albany and Troy. Then came an experience as a gatherer-up of gigantic quarries; from that line he switched to the control of the gas business in Albany and Troy. Some said that when he died he left $50,000,000; and his name had to be erased from the directorate of more than forty corporations, many of them, like the Brooklyn street railway system, the Westinghouse company, the American Tobacco company, and the United States Aubber company among the biggest in the land.

He was one of the close-mouthed millionaire financiers—one of the last survivors of that type among promoters of public service companies.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET RESUMES UPWARD TREND

Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Lehigh Valley, Copper and Steel Led

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Although trading was not heavy at the opening, material gains were made by leading stocks. St. Paul, the strongest stock, advanced 1¼ on the first transaction. Lehigh Valley gained a point, Reading ⅜ and Steel ⅝. Great Northern Ore lost a point.

Some indecision followed the initial rise, when profit-taking became evident in Union Pacific and New Haven turned weak. Later the market reached its highest level, with some of the specialties unusually active and strong. Steel and Canadian Pacific gained 1. American Locomotive continued to reflect the influence of its favorable annual report by rising 1½.

Various conditions were responsible for the growth of a more confident feeling which was reflected in the upward movement of stocks today despite the tendency toward conservatism engendered by the state of affairs in Mexico. Reports of good business on western roads were substantiated by the statement showing a decrease in the number of idle freight cars. Orders for some of the principal steel products were said to be increasing and a number of New England cotton mills resumed operation after a long period of idleness.

News from abroad told of a more cheerful feeling and speculation in American stocks was at a higher level. Apart from the weakness of New Haven the fall in which to 97¼ caused renewed discussion concerning dividend prospects, the movement was definitely upward, although the list paused at times to absorb realizing sales. Pool operations were instrumental in bringing some specialties to the front. Bonds steady.

Dividend gossip attended free buying of the local tractions. Interest in the railroad list was slight, and these stocks did not possess the same degree of stability as steel or the coppers, which were benefited by better trade conditions.

Profit-taking caused half point reactions in the leaders. The sustained advance in cotton futures also operated against a continuance of the rise. Can shares, bought heavily, moved up steadily despite the sag elsewhere.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The following were the open, high, low, last sale and previous close quotations on the stock exchange today:

Weakness in less active stocks passed unnoticed by the general list until just at the close when some shading of prices occurred here and there. Baltimore and Ohio gave way 1 and Biscuit 2 points. New Haven went to 96⅜.

Closed steady.

WHEAT AND CORN MARKETS STEADY ALL THE SESSION

Wheat Closed Unchanged to 1-4c Up—Corn Is Up—Oats, Pork Steady—Lard, Sides Off

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Corn went down today. Domestic weather conditions showed little change. There was good buying on both sides, resulting in an active trade, but narrow fluctuations. September, in which there was considerable liquidation and nearly a two cent drop Saturday, led the decline, opening at 71⅞ to 72⅝c, unchanged to ⅝c off. December was a shade to ⅜@¼c lower at 68c to 68⅛c. September held for a time within the opening range, but decreased to 68⅛c.

A further corn decline was followed by a rally. The clos was strong with December at 72⅞c, a net gain of ⅜@½c, and December at 62⅜@62½c, ¼c net higher.

Wheat eased on fine domestic weather. Opened a shade to ¼@⅜c lower, with December at 90@90⅛c to 90¼c, a decline of ⅛c to ¼@⅜c. Trade was light, and the market for a time steadied at first figures.

Wheat eased furter on a little selling pressure. The close was strong, however, with December at 90⅜@90½c, a net gain of a shade.

Oats fell. December opened ¼@⅜c to ⅜c off at 44c to 44@44⅛c, and steadied there.

Pressure in October lard caused declines in provisions. Opened unchanged to 5c lower, with January options as follows: Pork, $19.35; lard, $10.80 to $10.82½; ribs, $10.20.

THE FEEDING TEST, PEN No. 68.

For the purpose of determining something about the likes and dislikes of hens, a pen of ten hens, composed of five S. C. White Leghorns and five Buff Orpingtons, were placed in a house and yard at the Missouri State Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove the fifteenth day of last November, and have had thirty different kinds of the most staple foods obtainable in our state placed before them in open hoppers where they might take their choice and help themselves. For the first eight and a half months, the results have been as follows: They have eaten—

Grains—102 pounds wheat, 77 pounds corn, 72 pounds millet, 42 pounds sunflower seed, 41 pounds kaffir corn, 29 pounds hulled oats, 23 pounds oats, 17 pounds cane seed, 8 pounds buckwheat, 5 pounds cowpeas, 4 pounds rye, 4 pounds barley, 2 pounds rice.

Meat Food—324 pounds buttermilk, 2 pounds dry beef scrap, 2 pounds fish scrap.

Mill Products—35 pounds rolled oats, 22 pounds ground oats, 14 pounds corn meal, 13 pounds shorts or middlings, 6 pounds gluten meal, 6 pounds bran, 2 pounds flour, 1 pound O. P. oil meal.

Grit—20 pounds oyster shell, 5 pounds grit, 2 pounds charcoal, 2 pounds hard coal ashes.

Green Food—1 pound alfalfa meal.

Water, 435 pounds.

Summary of results for 8 1-2 months: 559 pounds feed consumed. 759 pounds water and milk, 144 pounds eggs laid, 1,444 eggs laid

It will be seen from the above that these hens ate more wheat than any other one food. They ate principally wheat, corn, millet, sunflower seed, kaffir corn, and oats. They ate four times as much ground and rolled oats as they did corn meal. They consumed but very little bran. They used four times as much oyster shell as grit. In animal or meat food they only ate two pounds each of beef scraps and fish scraps, and drank 324 pounds of buttermilk. They were out of buttermilk practically a month during this time and this accounts for the fact that they drank a little more water than buttermilk. When they had both before them and could take their choice, they drank about equal quantities of each. If this test indicates anything, it indicates that sour milk or buttermilk is a better meat food than beef scraps or fish scraps. They ate scarcely no alfalfa meal, in spite of the fact that this pen was kept on a bare yard and was given but little other green food. Our poultry will not eat alfalfa meal or shredded alfalfa, even when scalded, unless forced to do so by mixing it with other ground feeds. Out of practically every nine pounds of milk, water, and feed consumed, these hens manufactured one pound of eggs.

Yours very truly,

WE HAVE gotten in our fine importation of bulbs and they are the largest and best we have had for years. We import all of our bulbs direct from France and Holland, and they come from the best growers. It is time now to plant Paper White Narcissus, White Roman Hyacinths and Freesias. If you plant bulbs get your stock from Hastings and know you are getting the best.

THE BEST authorities on poultry raising claim that hens should be fed very little corn during the moult and that wheat is the very best feed during the moulting season. It is usually pretty hard to get good sound wheat at a reasonable price. We have bought one hundred bushels of extra fine stock and as long as it lasts we will sell it at $1.50 per bushel. You had better get a bag of this.

IF YOU love Canary birds it will pay you to come to our store and see the beautiful lot of songsters we have. They certainly are little beauties and going at $2.50 each. Guaranteed singers.

PHONE orders given prompt attention.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

REAL HOME PLACES

Every REAL HOME-SEEKER (by that we mean a person who is not satisfied with a house on a bare lot 50x100 feet, which is the average city lot), who wants a comfortable house on a big nicely shaded lot, say 100x200 feet in size, one that is large enough for a nice garden, plenty of room for a cow, chickens, or anything in the world the owner wants.

He finds this sort of a place once in a while. It is usually a long way out from town and the price is such, as a rule, that decides this problem for him; that is—sends him back to his 50x100 feet lot.

We have several places that would please this sort of person. Just off Stewart avenue, only 15 minutes' ride from town, convenient to both Stewart avenue and West End car lines, new city schools and large city park, we have a new six-room cottage, on lot 50x200. The lot next to it is 50x200, which can be bought for $900; the bungalow for $3,750, on reasonable terms. This gives you as nice a home place as you could wish for, 100x200 feet in size, for about $4,500.

We also offer, just off East Lake drive, on the South Decatur car line, only 20 minutes' ride from town, a new 7-room bungalow, situated in a pretty pine grove, on lot 100x200 feet. This can be bought for $3,000; reasonable terms.

If you want a REAL HOME place in the right section, at the right price, the above places would interest you.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Several Residence Sales, Made in Past Few Weeks, Are Announced by One Agency—Another Reports Good Headway on Some Semi-Central Transactions, Indicating Broadening of Real Estate Market—G. A. Wight With Kiser Agency

Some small transactions, mostly sales of residence properties, were announced on Monday.

One agent reported that he was close to two or three sales of semi-central property, which would indicate that the market is beginning to broaden.

The renting of houses continues to be active. This was indicated in the announcement Sunday of places rented by two agencies. The demand for houses keeps ahead of the supply.

Agents are encouraged by the fine crop prospects over the state and the high price for cotton. Cotton is now selling at 12 cents, and a short crop west of the Mississippi leaves the belief that the price will not slump. Georgia's yield is expected to be well over 2,000,000 bales, which represent a value of about $150,000,000.

SMALL REALTY SALES.

The Harper Realty company announces several sales in the past few weeks, most of them of residences. They sold for J. R. McAdams the following residences:

To Edgar Reeves, No. 5 Essie avenue, a six-room house, for $4,000.

To P. C. Leathers, No. 17 Palatine avenue, residence property, for $4,000.

To M. E. Garrison, No. 11 Essie avenue, a house and lot, for $3,450.

T. F. H. Hewlett, No. 15 Palatine avenue, a house and lot, for $3,850.

To a Mrs. Wood, No. 8 Essie avenue, a house and lot, $4,000.

To Mrs. Baker, No. 7 Essie avenue, residence property, for $4,000.

To A. C. Halliday, residence property at Delaware and Prospect avenues, $4,350.

To W. T. Merritt, No. 14 Woodward avenue, in Ormewood, residence property, $2,500.

For M. M. Kendall to B. L. Dunnaway, a house and lot at Hardee street and Clifton avenue, Kirkwood, for $2,500.

For Harper Brothers to G. G. Waters, a vacant lot on Melrose avenue, in Oakhurst, for $700, and for B. L. Dunnaway to M. M. Kendall, a lot on Morgan street.

It was the Harper Realty company which sold for Mrs. L. O. Harper to Harper Brothers twenty-one acres on the DeFoor Ferry road, 620 feet west of the Howell Mill road, at $500 an acre, announcement of which was made some time ago.

In that announcement, however, it was stated that this land was in the Bryant's district. As a matter of fact it is in the Seventeenth district.

WIGHT WITH KISER AGENCY.

G. A. Wight, formerly with the Wight-Davis company, on the South Broad street commission house, has severed his connection with that company to go into the real estate business.

Mr. Wight has joined the sales force of the M. C. Kiser agency, where he will be glad to see his friends.

Mr. Wight is a well known young business man. In addition to his general business activity, he has dealt in real estate considerably, and enters the active real estate field well equipped with practical experience.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Precious stones valued at $1,500,000 were guarded here today by one man while perhaps a dozen crooks passed the downtown hotel where they were on exhibition. The exhibit is an auxiliary to the four days' convention of the National Retail Jewelers' association, which begins here tomorrow.

He was arrested in Miami, Fla., at the request of Rome officers who had traced him to that pint.
